ARISTOCRATIC SMITHS.

They Lead the Four Hundred in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia.

The new Locater of the Social Register, just issued, contains an interesting study of names as they are given in the various Four Hundreds of the cities which have been listed. The Locater, which covers twenty-nine cities, contains the names of 95,648 persons. Of these 50,752 are grouped as Mr. and Mrs. and 44,896 appear as single.

In New York's Four Hundred the Smiths lead, there being 166 in the aristocratic inclosure. The Browns come next with 143, the Clarks third with ninety-one. Although less numerous, the Livingstons, with fifty-eight, are still typically of the metropolis, there being only four Livingstons outside New York. Three are in St. Paul, and one is in Cincinnati. In Washington the name of Davis comes first, with twenty-three, and the Harrisons, Parkers and Smiths are second, with twenty-two. There are twenty-one Johnsons. In Philadelphia there are 137 Smiths, ninety-two Morrises and eighty-nine Biddles.

In Chicago the Smiths are also in the lead. There they number fifty-five as against the thirty-five Adamses, the twenty-six Walkers and the twenty-five Masons. Boston, however, mightily reduces the general average of the Smiths, the Locater enumerating only five of that name who abide in the Back Bay region of the Hub. Boston list the Coolidges lead with thirty-eight, followed by the Peabodys and Putnams, thirty-five each. Providence has thirty-one Aldriches and twenty-two Arnolds. St. Louis has such old family names as the Garesches and Cabannes. Cincinnati leads with its Andersons, St. Paul with Hills and Minneapolis with Washburns. In San Francisco there are twenty-eight Adamses, and Baltimore abounds in Williamses and Jenkinses.

EXPERIMENT STATIONS.

Work of These Centers of Agricultural Investigation.

In the opinion of many qualified observers the agricultural experiment stations are proving to be one of the greatest agencies of helpfulness in the United States. Under a law passed nineteen years ago each of the states and territories receives several thousand dollars a year from the general government for this purpose. The states add about half as much more. These centers of practical investigation concerning the plant and animal life of the farm in all its bearings are putting numberless theories and customs to a rigid test. It was the practice twenty years ago to cook food for domestic animals, but exhaustive investigations in feeding seemed to show that this is not profitable, and a great change of custom has resulted.

The Minnesota station has accomplished much in improving wheat, the Illinois station in improving the corn yield, the Wisconsin station in the diary and the California station in the reclamation of alkali lands.

The experiment stations are gradually correcting certain of their original mistakes. There was a tendency at first to a duplication of work. Each attempted perhaps to do too many things. Now there is better co-ordination through the department of agriculture at Washington. The stations also are specializing and devoting themselves more particularly to local interests. Each agency has its sphere of influence. It is well to have some men in the community set apart to make the experimental studies for which the individual farmer could not spare the time. Millions of dollars in the aggregate may be lost by a single popular error if sufficiently widespread. To find out what is what is really the task stations are trying to perform.—New York Press.

Other Names For Automobiles.

A Berliner who long has been prominent in local transportation interests has established a motor cab service, the pleasing German name of his vehicles being "automobiletaxameterdroschken." Despite the preposterous title under which they run, the cabs are said to be remarkably handsome and graceful.

If there be anything in a name, the motorcars introduced into some parts of Belgium should instantly become swaybacked and top heavy. The Flemish word for automobile is "snelpaardeloosscoondersjoorweegpetrooirijuig."—New York Press.

Our Chief of Artillery.

Brigadier General Arthur Murray, U. S. A., chief of artillery, is recognized as one of the world's experts in submarine mines. In his hands rests much of the responsibility for guarding the shore line of the country. General Murray was born in Missouri in 1851 and was graduated at the United States Military academy, second in his class, in 1874. He is a lawyer as well as a military man and has also been a professor of military science and tactics at Yale. He has written several technical works relating to army subjects.—Argonaut.

Faithful Postal Workers.

The government has no employees more faithful and none upon whose personal honesty more depends than the thousands of postmasters and postal clerks in our nearly 6,000 postoffices. When one thinks of the countless letters in flimsy envelopes dropped into mail boxes and postoffices, with no protection except a 2 cent stamp and a thin piece of paper against the violation of secrets, the exposure of which might ruin a business, one realizes how much depends on the personal integrity of those who handle the mails. —Leslie's.

Cupid's Headquarters.

Judging by her rapidly increasing marriage returns Montreal might fairly be called the Canadian headquarters of Cupid.

Since 1908, when 3,515 marriages took place in Montreal, to 1911, when the figure had risen to 5,044, the increase among all sections of the community has been steadily maintained.

As a matter of fact Canada supplies the west with a big consignment of brides and bridegrooms and the only regret of her citizens is that some of the best type of married couples get married in the city, but never stay.

Thousands of white immigrants celebrate their weddings in Montreal, but they only do it as a convenience. Montreal does not profit by the result, though doubtless Canada as a whole does.

Last year the marriage rate in Montreal was 10.72 of the whole population; this year it promises to be considerably higher, so that the city will maintain her prominence from Cupid's point of view.

Oldest Mason In Canada

Joseph Mantle, the oldest Mason in Canada, who is now in his 104th year, arrived in London, Ont. recently, after visiting relatives in Toronto, and was on his way to attend the wedding of his niece, Miss Kathryn B. Colquhoun, to Mr. Arthur Essery of Vancouver, B.C., son of ex-Mayor Essery.

Mr. Mantle, although past the century mark, says he feels good for another hundred years, and was quite well when he arrived in London after a trip that many a younger man finds little enjoyment in. During the last couple of weeks he has visited friends in various Western Ontario towns and made the trip to London in easy stages.

Any weakness in your back?

Sometimes you experience pain and weakness without much suffering. Later on the pain will surely come. The trouble can be stopped now by rubbing on Nerviline —rub it in deeply over the spine, and then put on a Nerviline Porous Plaster. In these remedies you will find wonderful and quick relief. They will spare you from an attack of Lumbago, which is the outcome of neglected pain in the back or side. For all muscular pains, strains, and weakness, Polson's Nerviline and Nerviline Plasters have no equal. Refuse substitutes.

"SENSATION IN COURT."

The Most Dramatic Scenes in Great Legal Cases.

Few dramatic scenes have held a law court so spellbound as that enacted in the recent £1,000,000 will case.

In this instance it was the sudden production and reading of a private letter which thrilled and amazed all who were there.

Sir Charles Mathews, the Director of Public Prosecutions, has seen some terribly dramatic moments in the courts. Curiously enough, the most dramtic of all was in a will case, when Sir Charles appeared as prosecuting counsel against a solicitor charged with having forged the will of a dead lady.

For the defence a woman swore that she had seen the lady, who was ill in bed at the time, sign the will. She added that the prisoner handed the deceased lady the ink and pen with which to sign.

"Did he touch her hand?" demanded Sir Charles.

"I think he did just touch her hand," the witness replied.

"When he did touch her hand?" proceeded Sir Charles, and in an instant his voice rose and became harsh and terrible, "was she dead?"

Turning deadly pale, the witness seemed to struggle for breath, swayed in the box, and fainted. The solicitor had taken the hand of the dead woman and with it had written her name to the forged will.

Hanged by the Court Clock.

Nearly every murder trial has its tense moments when every eye is on the witness in the box. A man named Hardy was on trial, and a witness swore most persistently that the prisoner had been in his company at the time the murder was committed.

"Are you quite certain of the exact time?" asked the prosecuting counsel.

"Certain!" replied the witness.

"How are you so sure about it?"

"We were in the Bear public house, and I saw the time by the clock in the bar," said the witness; "it was twenty-seven minutes past nine."

"You saw that clock yourself?" asked counsel.

"Yes."

Suddenly counsel turned round, and, pointing dramatically to the clock in the court said, "You see that clock! What is the exact time by it?"

The witness became ghastly pale, gasped, and was silent.

He looked helplessly at the counsel and then at the clock.

He had been lying, for he could not tell the time!

The prisoner was condemned.

Few people who were present will forget the dramatic outburst of Seddon when on his trial for the murder of Miss Barrow.

In vehement tones and with hand uplifted, the murderer declared, "I swear before God that these are the words that were used."

Great as was the effect of this dramatic utterance on the jury, it was all destroyed by the quiet reply of Sir Rufus Isaacs.

"Mr. Seddon," he said, "all the statements you have been making are statements before God!"

Censor of Morals in India.

The state of Faridkot, in the Punjab, is making an interesting experiment in the censorship of public morals.

The affairs of Faridkot are administered by the president of the Council of Regency, whose avowed aim is to develop a perfect community, where no crime shall exist and where all men shall work for the public good. He has set up a system of state registers, under which the whole people are classified under three heads, Good Characters, Conciliators and Evildoers. The system is all embracing, so that there is hardly an inhabitant of a village whose name is not duly recorded according to his conduct and character. The names are entered in a public place so that all may see them and know their moral standing. Everyone therefore is always careful that his character is absolutely free from fault. We are gravely assured that in six months the system has had the miraculous effect of ridding Faridkot of "litigation, disputes, criminality and immoral and unsocial practice."

Nice for the Porter.

Another story which Oxford has laid to the credit of Dr. Spooner refers to an occasion when he was seeing Mrs. Spooner off by train.

First of all, on arriving at the station he called a porter and said; "Put this rag and the two bugs in the town drain!" What he wanted, of course, was to have two bags and a rug put in the down train, and the porter, knowing the Warden, did as he was expected.

Then, just as the train was about to start and Dr. Spooner was saying goodbye to his wife, the porter came along for his tip. Dr. Spooner immediately gave his wife a shilling and kissed the porter! That, at least, is the story they tell in Oxford.

Queen Bars Riding Astride.

Queen Mary of England is a great stickler for the proprieties and her latest edict is against women riding astride.

Of course, the Queen has no power to prevent English women from riding on cross saddles if they want to, but she decidedly refused to attend the International Horse Show in London unless it was stipulated that all the lady participants ride on side saddles. Since the Queen rules the King it is said, and since the King could stop royal patronage of the show, which would mean a great financial loss, the edict went forth.

Flower Bed Signs.

Now that the large advertising posters that were so great a disfigurement of the country on either side of the French railway lines have been rendered illegal by Act of Parliament, advertisers on the Orleans Railway have begun to plant flower beds of brilliant colors in the fields on either side of the line, with the flowers arranged so as to spell the name of the goods to which they are to call attention.

TO ENTER WILDS.

Intrepid Teacher Will Explore Hinterland of Canada.

From the cramped routine of the class room to the freedom of the untrammelled and untracked regions of the Far Northwest—that is the leap that Miss Mary Jobe, professor of history in the New York Normal College, has made this summer, the sixth time in eight years.

Miss Jobe is a tall, strong, handsome young woman, both a scholar and an athlete. And these two sides of development she has kept pretty evenly balanced ever since. During the school year she is indefatigable in arousing and holding the interest of the students in the subject in which she is so proficient. In addition to her class room work she lectures on the results of her explorations with great success. Last year she gave forty lectures.

Miss Jobe is now on her way to Prince Rupert, where she is to start on a lonely, hazardous trip, penetrating a country where no white person has ever ventured, at least not since the Hudson Bay Company made its discoveries, many years ago. Just before she left New York, Miss Jobe said to a reporter that she expected to make this the most important of all the expeditions that she has undertaken, and she has been on five others, all eventful and interesting.

"I hope that as a result of my travels this summer there will be something new to put on the map of Northwestern British Columbia. I have helped to do that in Central British Columbia."

Miss Jobe was with Professor Herschel C. Parker on a trip that he made for the Canadian Topographical Survey, and was one of the two women to ascend Mount Sir Sandford with him. She is a member of the Canadian Alpine Club, and on her way west stopped to confer with officials and others interested in the exploration of the Northwest. From Vancouver she pushed up the coast by boat through the inland route to Prince Rupert, the terminus of the Grand Trunk Railroad, which Miss Jobe speaks of with enthusiasm as one of the loveliest harbors in the world and destined to become one of the most important.

She expects to do some exploring in motor boats in the waters of that locality and then will proceed up the Skeena River to Hazleton, the last outpost of civilization, with a population of perhaps one hundred and fifty persons. From this point she will plunge into the unknown, taking with her only two Indian packers. "I may find a few white persons on ranches near by," she explained. "I have heard that there are some squaw men who have taken up land. You know, the traces of the old Hudson Bay Company have persisted through all these years. But aside from these traces I shall probably be the only white person, certainly the only white woman, to penetrate the country.

"I have friends in Prince Rupert who have selected my packers for me, and I can rely upon them absolutely. I know the Siwash, the dialect used by the Indians along the coast, and I have no fear of getting into difficulties.

In deference to the urgent requests of my friends, I shall carry a revolver. Personally, I would not feel the need of it. Oh, yes, I can shoot with revolver or rifle. I am not sure, but I do not think I shall use ponies. If I decide to do so I think I can buy them when I get there, but I think I can do better by going on foot. I am an excellent walker.

"What do I wear on my feet? Wait a moment and I will show you. Here are boots that I wore last year and they are good for more service, hobnailed, and soft, strong leather. They come half way to the knees. Here is my wardrobe, if you care to look at it. This is my 'best dress.' Yes, it is made of a kind of flannel, like men's outing shirts." This suit is made with bloomers, a kind of military blouse of Miss Jobe's own designing, and a short skirt. "I shall wear this on the boat going up to Prince Rupert, but when I get down to work, here is what I depend upon," said Miss Jobe, displaying a trim blouse and trousers of serviceable corduroy and another of khaki. "Oh, yes, I have to take along plenty of warm clothing because I sometimes get into high altitudes, but I leave out frills.

An Eloquent Pastor.

Rev. Dr. James Henderson, formerly pastor of Dominion Methodist Church, Ottawa, has accepted a call to the Eaton Memorial Church, Toronto. While pastor in Ottawa Dr. Henderson's health was not good and since leaving here two years ago he has been resting in different parts of Great Britain. He is returning fully recuperated and will enter on his new duties in the course of a few months.

Dr. Henderson is regarded as one of the most winning and magnetic pulpit personalities in the Methodist Church in Canada and his temporary retirement was deeply regretted.

He is a native of Airdrie, Scotland, and was ordained to the ministry of the Methodist Church in 1876. Since then he has been pastor of some of the most important churches in the eastern part of the Dominion. For a year he held the position of associate secretary of the Methodist Missionary Society. He is an honorary member of the Canadian Temperance League and has been a delegate to the General Conference frequently.

Dr. Henderson is famed for his pulpit eloquence and was referred to in Baltimore as "the Cicero of Canadian Methodism." He does not believe in a material hell.

Envoy From Cuba.

A recent visitor to the Dominion was Jose Montesino y Garcia, of Havana, Cuba, who is seeking better trade relations with Canada. Recently, he said, the Cubans had undertaken the raising of cattle on a large scale, and, wonderful success was being obtained. In connection with this a demand was being created for Canadian hay and oats. Cubans are also importing Canadian flour for their own use.

In the matter of trade, he thought the greatest friendship should exist between the two countries. Of the seven principal banks in Cuba, the Royal Bank of Canada stood next to the First National Bank of Cuba and had six branches there.

A Safe Investment.

ONE of the safest investments of to-day is to place your spare cash in building lots. It will in a short time yield for you a large return. No fear of land depreciating in value. Purchase a lot as an investment—if you do not want it for yourself, secure one for your wife or children as a sensible present, and watch it grow in value. Do not buy it for cash, pay for it by instalments. The easy payments you will never miss. Call and see us, and we will explain the plan more fully.
