

partner in a brother-in-law of the Hon. Michael Adams. Thus something came across Mr. Sutherland, for it was not his purchase for a few months he decided it on Dec. 13, 1882, to Mr. Adams. It is just possible that Mr. Adams may be a hurry to get quit of it, too, when he finds how little he has got. In fact, it is difficult to believe that Adams, who is of property being so thoroughly demoralized by so much water within a narrow limit. Lady Davidson's Wise Sutherland! Unfortunate Adams!

But in whatever way it was managed, it nevertheless came about that it was managed in and in spite of the fact that Adams had no privilege to sell such a privilege was sold. On the 21st August, 1882, when the Government was informed of this, it was not until the 21st August, 1882, that the Government was informed of this. It is, however, scarcely credited in the history of the transaction that while hitherto for some time the Government had held the ungranted lands at an average price of $2 per acre, the fishing privilege was put up at one dollar an acre. It is reported that to successfully acquire this privilege, Adams had to actually deliver from the other interests, and still remains unused. And yet the ex-Surveyor General, the Hon. Michael Adams, in his place last year, had the opportunity to challenge a reference of these transactions to a committee. And what would a committee do? Why should a committee be appointed? Why should a committee be appointed? Why should a committee be appointed?

Measured by the standards of those who have of late been the more active political partisans of the person whose betrayal of misplaced honour and trust is so thoroughly exposed in the above-quoted article, we presume the whole transaction will be condoned as only an overrunning of the law, and for Newcastle. So long as any transaction in which "Newcastle" is interested can be carried through (and by Newcastle we mean the half dozen men who are so far above their fellows in the town that latter are honored in being permitted to sit at their feet and support them in the most abject admiration) the means, however base, are only a secondary consideration and they are always approved. What is the chief character of this Northwest business? We will, no doubt, be contented in the state for the time being employed by the man who so scandalously prostituted his office, for judging his conduct by the proper moral standard. No one will grudge the possession of our fishing privileges to our own people, for we all admit that the outside have, too long, had the advantage of us in such matters, but the desire to own the best salmon pools of the Northwest Miramichi was not confined to the Adamses and the Cals and their wonderful New York friends. There are as good apartments as any in New Brunswick, alone, who would, no doubt, have given much more for the pools named in the above article than they brought, and no honest Surveyor-General, knowing the facts, would have paid the quiet shufflers by which Mr. Adams and his private party were saved from paying the value of the public property of which they desired to possess themselves. Such a transaction by a Crown Minister fifty years ago would have sent him from public life in disgrace. We all remember the Fisheries land scandal of a few years ago, which was followed by the forfeit of his office in the Government by one and his position in the Crown Lands Department by the other, but we fear we have now come to more degenerate days, when men may betray public trust with impunity. Whatever may be the judgment of the class who think everything right that certain men do, no man who values public honor or desires to respect our public can think of this Northwest deal without a sense of shame. We shall, no doubt, find the ex-Surveyor General putting the usual brazen front on and asking us all what we are going to do about it! We shall have the shares in the privileges of which the Province has been fleeced working fully up to the date of whitewashing him, and Ministers will be seen to depend on, perhaps, incapable of really knowing what to think. The constituency is not to be deceived that has lost its self-respect as to experience any feeling but one of humiliation and regret over having chosen such a representative.

The Ontario Bribery Cases. The manner in which leading Conservative papers of this province have attempted recently to be in the interest of that party to bribe Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature, is not an encouraging sign of the times to those who desire that the dignity and purity of Canadian political institutions should be maintained. Many of these papers simply take the ground suggested by Mr. Meredith, the Conservative opposition leader, that because the members approached did not at once appear the tempters, the disgrace of the subsequent developments is theirs. An Attorney-General Mowat said, however, "Any man, in permitting overtures to be made, might take one or two courses; he might do what these hon. members did, and which is for the public interest, or keep his hands off the money, and let the corruption which might go on. It was their duty to bring them to justice, and to bring down the law, they would have accomplished it if they had not taken place." In other words, the bribers might have made their first offer, and been promptly repulsed by the gentleman approached, the result being that they would be left free to ply their temptations in any manner they pleased. There was no way of capturing corrupting them but the one adopted, and it was not only justifiable but the duty of the members approached to accept it.

Mr. Bunting, chief editor of the Mail, is a man who is not only a member of the Legislative Council, but he publishes a statement respecting alleged negotiations with one member of the Legislature, which, if true, is much in his favor. He says—

It is a matter of course that it is not my duty to disclose any information which would be to the disadvantage of any member of the Legislature, but I am bound to state that I have received from Mr. Bunting a statement made to me by him, in relation to the sale of the Crown Lands, which I have not had time to verify. not have recommended a man so suitably capable, as Mr. Mitchell must know that Sullivan has always boasted that he could make a good thing out of anything. The Chatham Curriers in Luck. Wm. Johnston Esq. of the Canada Press, has arranged the Chatham Curriers at an Oyster Supper on Thursday evening last. As usual, the Curriers turned out in large force and ample justice was done to host Johnston's spread. Owing to ill health the President and Vice President were unable to present, but the chair was ably filled by Jas. Neilson Esq., one of our oldest curriers and a honorary member of the Club. The usual, interesting and amusing "Queen" followed by "The Prince of Wales," were drunk with curriers' enthusiasm, even the beverage was nothing more potent than cold water. The "Hot and Hoarse" was responded to by Mr. Johnston, who in his usual happy style, paid a handsome tribute to the prowess of the Chatham Curriers, as shown by their recent victory over the St. John's knights of the besom. The "Queen" was followed by "The Prince of Wales," were drunk with curriers' enthusiasm, even the beverage was nothing more potent than cold water.

Bartholomew. On Wednesday, March 25th, 1884, the March term of the Gloucester County Court opened on Tuesday last, His Honor Judge Williams presiding. There was a full attendance of grand jurors. His Honor, in charging the jury, referred to the improvements which had been made during the recess in the interior of the Court House, and which would prove comfortable and convenient to the Court and public. He also referred to the new license Act which he hoped would receive the moral support of all good citizens. The docket was made up as follows:

The License Board. The License Board for this County under the new License Act met on Saturday last and granted certificates for Licenses to nearly all the old licensees, numbering about eighteen.

The Wireless Fish-hatcheries. One of the most important features of the Fisheries report is that it proves once more that the money expended on fish-hatcheries is absolutely wasted. Parliament should insist on knowing why this waste is permitted to go on.

Was it His Honor? The Advocate of this week says, "Councillor Jeremiah Sullivan, Esq., has been appointed by the Dominion Government to superintend the fisheries on the Miramichi, and to report on the state of the fishery between Jinnico's and Esquimaux Light-houses."
