THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Emery rod and Towel drier—found Only on Pandora

When a knife is dull a Pandora owner never wastes time hunting for a "steel." She just walks over to the emery rod attachment to Pandora, gives knife six or eight passes over the high-grade emery, which puts on the keenest kind of an edge. This combined emery rod and towel drier is a patent secured on any other range. Just one of the many improvements that go to make Pandora the handiest range you can buy.

THE GREAT ARCTIC EXPLORERS OF HISTORY

Sir Edward Parry
To Sir Edward Parry belongs the distinction of initiating sledge journeys over the Arctic ice. In 1827, having made a great reputation by his voyages in search of a north-west passage, he was given charge by the Admiralty of an expedition which aimed at reaching the North Pole from Spitzbergen by means of combined boats and sledges. He left his ship in Freuchen Bay, latitude 79 deg. 55 min. N., on June 21 with twenty-eight companions. Two days later loose packed ice was encountered. The labor of alternately launching the boats and hauling them over the hummock ice was enormous, and finally the efforts of the explorers were almost neutralized by a southerly drift. On July 23 Parry reached his northernmost point in latitude 82 deg. 45 min. N., 435 geographical or about 523 statute miles from the Pole. The average rates of progress northwards had been about six miles a day, but Parry calculated that in one way and another he had covered a distance "nearly sufficient to have reached the pole in a direct line." Although the expedition had very severe conditions to contend with.

William Scoresby
For close on 300 years the most constant navigators of far-northern waters have been the whalers. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries some of them may possibly have attained higher latitudes than any then recorded, but they were not out for geographical discovery or scientific investigation, and as a rule little is known about their voyages. The two Scotch whalers, William Scoresby, father and son, provide an exception to this statement, combining a geographical with a commercial interest. In 1806 the father, having entered the back ice in the Spitzbergen Sea, at the end of April detected from the crew's nest—of which he was the inventor—signs of open water to the north. By the most strenuous efforts the ship was forced through the ice, found beyond it an abundance of whales, and finally

Heart Strength
Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Frequently not one weak heart in a hundred is in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden but little nerve that really is at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or "Heart Nerve"—is the only one that has more power, more stability, more controlling more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have less sense controlling nerves.
