FACTS AND FALLACIES ABOUT TUBERCULOSIS.

A Child May be Born with a Tendency to Consumption, but if Proper Care is Taken It May be Overcome.

Although there are many things that we do not know about consumption or tuberculosis, there are some that we do and a few that we are in the act of learning.
We do not know, for example, what makes for susceptibility and what for immunity. Strong and robust persons are sometimes stricken down with it; invalids and convalescents from other diseases are no more susceptible to it than are other people, and it is possible to live for an entire lifetime in the condition known as "run-down" or "weak" without becoming tuberculous.

People, says a writer, still speak of consumption as "inherited," but it is not inherited. A child may be born with a certain tendency to it, but proper measures are taken early, and kept up steadily and long enough, this tendency can be overcome. A child whose parents before him, and their parents before them, perhaps for generations back have been poor breathers, will probably inherit a small, meagre chest, and will therefore be the natural victim of the consumption germ as soon as it reaches him. That child will have to be taught to breathe. The tendency to pigeon-breast can be overcome. A narrow chest developed to a normal capacity; but to do this, the child must be kept constantly in good air, and taught how to develop and use the lungs. A pigeon-breasted child who is being brought up on the codding process—oversheltered, overfed and overclothed—is in as much danger as if he lived under the famous sword hanging from a hair.

WATER CARRIERS IN PARIS.

In the Modern Babylon Water is Still Brought in the Old-fashioned Way.

Paris is rich in contrasts, and sometimes the irony is charming. In the height of fashion to-day is still to be seen on the picturesque streets of Montmartre are to be seen these robust Auvergnats, marching with their measured steps, and by a fiction, the Paris water-carrier must always be an Auvergnat—with his two buckets The extension of the water system has gone hard with the "portier d'eau," who in days past made a fairly good living. In 1850 there were 1,253 portiers; in 1880 one number had fallen to 800; and to-day there are few indeed. Acquired water com-tains about 1,000 litres, and its market value is about five francs. Like most other occupations in France, the water-carrier was under State or police supervision, and each night he had to fill his barrel and place it in the district he worked, so as to be ready in case of fire, but the supervision has fallen into desuetude.

Sword in a Plank.

A curious discovery has been made at Oakley Station, near Dunfermline, Scotland. In the course of alterations for the purpose of heightening the platform it was found necessary to substitute a fresh plank of wood for an old one. The latter was being swung up for firewood when a sword was found imbedded in the heart of it. The plank had formed part of the platform support for at least fifteen years. There was little rust on the weapon, which was an old-fashioned type, a short cross piece forming the handle. How the sword could have rot where it was discovered is a mystery, as there was no indication from the outside of the plank where it had entered, and it is believed that it had been picked up by the tree at an early period of its existence and accreted with the growth.

A King's Retreat.

We often hear of Bosobel Oak, people pointing to it as the very tree which sheltered Charles II. after the Royalist forces had been shattered at the battle of Worcester. But the Bosobel Oak is not the original tree; it has grown from an acorn taken from the original tree. Bosobel House, near by, is, however, the very house in which he hid. He lay concealed in a hole beneath a trap-door in the cheese-room, but as soldiers were everywhere about he had to crawl out of the chimney and make his way into a wood and hide in an oak tree. Returning when the danger was for a moment passed, he spent another night at the house, then, early in the morning, took food and drink with him to the oak tree, climbed up and stayed there for twenty-four hours. During that time Cromwell's soldiers passed beneath the tree searching for him, and he heard them saying what they would do if they caught him.

Complicated Census Work.

Census taking in China, it would appear, is a business complicated by Chinese customs. Thus the Chinese method of reckoning age is not the same as the European. A Chinese child at birth is said to be one year old, and after it has passed one New Year it is said to be two years old; so that if born in the last month of the year it may be said to be two years of age before it is 30 days old according to European reckoning.
Difficulties are encountered in China, as elsewhere, in regard to the ages of females. There was an old lady of Ching-tzu known to be over 100 who lived to the enumeration of Your dear delight, a new tea joy to your lips!

For into tea flavor—the very essence of tea joy—an even richer fullness, a more zestful vigor has been blended.
The result is King Cole Tea. With your very first sip you marvel that such flavor-improvement could be possible! It tastes so unusually good. And it never varies, Unparalleled Task.

Winchester Cathedral Saved by a Diver's Pluck.

After six years of groping and toiling in darkness in twenty feet of water beneath the walls of Winchester, (England) Cathedral, W. R. Walker, a diver, has almost completed a task unparalleled in the history of diving.

Winchester Cathedral had for some years shown unmistakable signs of sinking foundations. Its foundation was laid in the thirteenth century. There are visible signs today that the original work was interrupted by an inflow of water.

The walls began to crack and lean out of the perpendicular. After many consultations and inspections by engineers and architects it was decided that the only way to save the cathedral from collapsing was to employ a diver. Pumping was out of the question, as the silt or sand would be sucked up from the other parts of the foundations and then the whole structure would have come tumbling down. The problem the architects had to face was how to remove the peat and substitute concrete without using the pump.

Diving apparatus was installed and Walker, a man of great experience in deep sea work, went down into the dark cavernous holes and began a task that was expected to take about a year to complete. But the difficulties were enormous He had to work in absolute darkness and to feel his way into the water, the physical difficulties preventing the use of artificial light.

Bit by bit he excavated the peat at the foundations and jute bags containing concrete were then lowered to him. As each bag was placed in position he lit it open with a knife and spread the cement over the surface. The whole restoration scheme has cost over £100,000.

Meeker—"Did you tell the cook that I strangled about the food?"

Mrs. Meeker—"Yes."

Meeker—"What did she say?"

Mrs. Meeker—"She said I might inform you that there were no strings tied to you, and if her cooking didn't suit you could take your meals elsewhere."

It is said that man's secretiveness is responsible for woman's curiosity.

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain.
It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good." It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures.
Ask Your Neighbors. They probably know of some of its many cures.
If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page Illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers, in handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
