

YOUR STATIONERY

—Does it reflect your good taste?

Is the impression that its quality leaves on those who receive your letters just what you would desire?

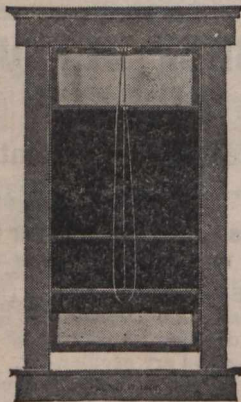

When one considers the importance of good stationery, the expense seems trivial. For a supply of hand-made paper, embossed with your monogram or address, in, for instance, grey-blue, the cost would be quite moderate, and after the first order still less.

We shall be glad to send you a selection of attractive and tasteful styles of both embossing and paper.

The History of the Present War will bulk very largely in all teaching of history this year.

To meet this need, The School has published in book form all the material on the present war which appeared in its ten war numbers during the past two years.

This material has been tested by actual classroom use. It fills 151 pages of the book. It provides you with what you need to teach for examination purposes.

Of course, the teacher who wishes to produce interest and enthusiasm, to put "life" into his lesson, must read much outside the actual work. For this reading consult the publishers' advertisements in this issue, and in our book when you receive it. These lists are both comprehensive and attractive. Add some of these books to your library.

Our war book costs 40 cents, post-paid.
