THREE YEARS FOR MILITANT

Mrs. Pankhurst Receives Severe Sentence To-day

She Made Bitter Statement To the Court.

(Canadian Press Despatch)
LONDON, April 3.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the leader of the militant suffragettes, was today guilty and sentenced to three years' penal servitude at the Old Sessions on the charge of 10 persons to commit damage.

The trial had lasted two days when the judge, Sir Charles Lush, pronounced sentence. Mrs. Pankhurst received with her speech was received with loud "shame" from the militant suffragettes, who crowded the court thus expressed their horror at the term of imprisonment imposed on her.

The jury when it returned a verdict of guilty added a strong recommendation for mercy and the judge pronounced the heavy sentence of three years the women rose in a protest. Mrs. Pankhurst in the prisoners' enclosure had pathetically cheered and sung, "march on, march on," to the tune "Les." "Case Close To-day."

The case of the British Government this morning against Mrs. Pankhurst, the militant suffragette, on the charge of having sold certain persons, whose names are unknown, to place feloniously certain gunpowder and other explosive substances in the house of the late Duke of Devonshire, was closed today. Mrs. Pankhurst had pleaded "not guilty."

The only interesting development in the evidence to-day was in the revelations made by the witness who had fruitlessly tried to identify Mrs. Pankhurst as the person who had furnished the gunpowder to the late Duke of Devonshire. She was imprisoned under the name of Margaret James and served six months in jail on February 19, 1912, on a charge of being a nuisance to the windows.

"Would Not Testify." Mrs. Pankhurst to-day informed the court that she did not wish to call witnesses. Her only reason for not doing so was to address the judge as to the matter in which she was so far from the matter in court, that the judge severed her from the case.

Mrs. Pankhurst denied any incitement. She said that she nor the other militant suffragettes were wicked or malicious. She complained that the women tried by their peers and men were suffering in order to obtain their rights.

"Showed Much Feeling." Personally, she continued, she had to surrender a large portion of her income in order to be free. Pankhurst fiercely criticized the law alone was sufficient to revolution by the women.

In impassioned tones she said that whatever might be her fate she would not submit. From the moment when she left the prison she would refuse to eat and would "hunger strike." She said she came out of prison at the earliest possible moment. "I want to live until the deed is done. I will take the deepest agony other women have taken will keep it up as long as a ounce of strength left in me." (Continued on Page 15)
