BUNK FROM BOURASSA

By Courier Leased Wire
Montreal, March 7.—Le Devoir says the official figures of the elections maintain the claim, often put forward by Le Devoir that there was as much anti-conscription sentiment in Ontario as there was in Quebec. The figures show that while in Quebec there was a total of 243,472 votes cast against the ministry, in Ontario there were no fewer than 268,218 ballots against the Union Government and its policy. In general proportions the anti-conscription vote has been as strong in Ontario as it was in Quebec. Outside of Ontario and Quebec the anti-ministerial vote was 248,216, or more than that of Quebec. In other words there were twice as many anti-conscriptionists in the rest of Canada as there was in Quebec. This, of course will not prevent certain newspapers asserting that Quebec is the hotbed of opposition to conscription.

PROTEST AGAINST GRANT TO STREET RAILWAY MANAGER

Trades and Labor Council
Censured C. H. Hartman
Last Night

The Trades and Labor Council devoted their attention to various matters of more or less importance last night, foremost among their deliberations upon the administration of the street railway, a resolution of protest being passed against the grant made to Commissioner C. H. Hartman for his services as manager of the system.

On behalf of the Auditors' Committee, Delegate Kite reported that outstanding accounts against a number of local unions had been paid.

A. G. Brown was instructed to prepare a full statement of the financial affairs of the defunct Brantford Free Press, of which he was business manager, and also to collect outstanding accounts, on a commission basis.

Street Railway Managership.
Delegate McGrattan voiced a protest against a civic grant of $200 to C. H. Hartman, contending that his emolument as a street railway commissioner should recompense him for the discharge of his duties.

Delegate Kite pointed out that if Mr. Hartman were discharging the duties of manager of the railway, in addition to those of a commissioner, he was entitled to extra reimbursement.

"The commissioners have been elected to run the system," declared Delegate McGrattan, "and if they choose to run it without a manager, they must do so without paying themselves extra salaries."

Delegate Parmenter, an employee of the street railway, reported that he had been censured by Mr. Hartman for offering suggestions to the commission, when the rule book of the system requested all employees to do so. He advocated the election of a labor man to the railway commission.

A. G. Brown criticized Mr. Hartman's qualifications for the managerial position.
Delegate McGrattan ditto.

Resolution of Protest.
Delegate Crandell criticized Mr. Hartman's connection with the railway yard in addition to his railway duties.

The following resolution was passed:
That this Council views with disfavor the recent extra grant of $258 given to Mr. C. H. Hartman, and that they strongly protest against any special grants given in future, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the City Council and to the Railway Commission.

Patronize Union Dealers
A. G. Brown suggested the compilation of a list of union merchants in the city, those handling union-made goods and favoring, or at least not opposing, the labor movement.

Want Better Attendance
The proposal was endorsed by several other speakers, who held forth for action to increase the attendance at Trades and Labor Council meetings.

Messrs. Innes, Crandell and Parmenter were appointed a delegation to wait upon the local unions to urge the latter matter.

A. G. Brown was commissioned merchants for display within the precincts of the Labor Temple.

Laborers' Union
Delegate Kite and McGrattan broached the subject of a laborers' union, an organization of unskilled workmen in the city. An organization committee was appointed of Messrs. Kite, Brown and McGrattan to go into the matter.

Daylight Saving
Delegate Parmenter favored Dominion-wide daylight saving. President Stinchcombe pointed out that last year the council had taken a decisive stand against this scheme. His proposal was taken as a notice of motion.

Delegate McGrattan gave notice of motion to have the street railway waiting room on the market square remain open until 11.30 p. m. when the last car runs, instead of closing at 11 or earlier.

CHOICE LIES BETWEEN TWO.
John Dillon and Joseph Devlin, are regarded as the only possible men to succeed John Redmond, the dead Irish Nationalist leader. Dillon, seen wearing a hat is a 65-year old veteran, whose extremist views may put him out of the running. Devlin at the top left-hand corner, a much younger man, leader of the Hibernian Society, has given much evidence of the leadership qualities which make him the choice. Redmond is seen in the small portrait.

George Lavigne Was Always a Hard one to Beat in the Ring

Even Great Giant Killer Joe

Walcott Could Not Stop
Saginaw Kid.

When Young Griffo said recently that the principal difference between the present crop of lightweights and those of his day was that the old-timers were more rugged than the new ones, he was certainly right. Probably no glove bout in the old days furnished better evidence of the toughness of the men than the famous battle between George Lavigne and Joe Walcott, which took place at Maspeth, L.I., on Dec. 2, 1895.

Walcott was known as the "Barbarian Demon," and was certainly a terror. He had tremendous lungs, thick arms, a bulging chest and his closely cropped head was buried between a pair of broad shoulders that would not have looked out of place on a 200 pounder.

He was a killing puncher, had plenty of speed and was highly scientific as well. The most discouraging thing about fighting Walcott was that his body was so thickly covered with muscle that it seemed impossible to hurt him with a five ounce glove and his jaw was equally well protected behind his huge shoulders.

The size of his opponent never daunted Walcott. He was just as willing to fight heavyweights as men of his own weight. He knocked out Joe Ghymski, one of the fastest and most scientific heavyweights of the time, and he beat Greco, another famous heavyweight, on four different occasions, the last time knocking him out in the last round.

Greco was so well thought of that he was one of the best fighters in the world. Walcott picked up a fight with him in order to prove that he was worthy of a match for the title.

At the time Walcott and Lavigne met, Jack McAuliffe, the lightweight champion, had refused to accept the match for the vacant title. Lavigne had cleaned up all the white men of his weight, but Walcott was so generally avoided that in order to get the match he agreed that if he did not stop Lavigne inside the limit of fifteen rounds the latter was to get the title.

The conditions called for the men to weigh in at 135 pounds. Walcott was Lavigne's natural weight, 135, and there was some doubt whether he could reduce to the lightweight limit without weakening himself.

Because of this doubt, and the fact that the negro had to score a knockout in order to get the decision, the betting on the fight was at even money.

The fight that followed was so fiercely contested that even in that day of sanguinary battles it was regarded as a classic of its kind. For twelve rounds Walcott ripped and tore with slashing jabs and cruel swings, while Lavigne remained more or less on the defensive.

The white boy presented a battered sight as he came up for the thirteenth round. But despite the punishment Lavigne never stopped smiling and although much the worse for wear he was the fresher of the two, for Walcott had fought himself out in his anxiety to land a finisher.

In the thirteenth round Lavigne began to fight in earnest. He took the aggressive and fairly sweet the exhausted negro off his feet with furious rushes. Lavigne's vitality and endurance were marvellous. Walcott, who had been grunting cheerfully, lost his confidence and his face turned ashen in hue. Lavigne smashed him on the nose with a straight left and buried his right hand in the body. Walcott backed hastily away and Lavigne followed with both hands flying.

Walcott was planned in a corner. His guard dropped and he was slowly sinking when the bell ended the round.

The fourteenth round went the same way. Lavigne furiously aggressive and Walcott doing his best to protect himself. Again the bell came to his rescue when he was on the point of going down and out.

Walcott was game and in the final round he rallied and fought back desperately, giving blow for blow. But the wonderful vitality of the white boy was too much for the negro, and Lavigne was having all the better of it when the bell ended the round and the fight.

The referee's decision, of course, was that Lavigne had won, as he had no alternative because of the conditions of the match. But for that he probably would have decided in Walcott's favor, as the negro had won the first twelve rounds. Lavigne, however, insisted that he would have scored a knockout in a few more rounds.

When Lavigne won.

Despite Lavigne's sensational rally, his followers were inclined to think that Walcott would beat him in a straight match. It was pointed out that the negro had overtaxed his strength in his efforts to secure a knockout or he could have maintained the upper hand all the way. The question was partly settled two years later when the men faced each other in a San Francisco ring and Walcott quit in the twelfth round, saying that his arm was broken.

Walcott seemed to be winning at the time, and it was rumored that he had quit because pressure had been brought to bear upon him by the gambling element. So whether Walcott or Lavigne was the better man was never definitely settled, but there is no question that they were a remarkable pair of fighters.

SERIOUS SEQUEL TO DIVORCE ACTION

The arrest of two men and a woman charged with attempting to blackmail Paul Edward Heller, wealthy president of Heller Bros. Steel Company, of Newark, N.J., out of $20,000, has furnished a sensational sequel to a divorce action begun by Philip F. Kastel, a mining stock broker with desk room at 20 Broad street, New York, against his wife, Mrs. Maude E. Kastel, who has an apartment at No. 200 West 48th street.

Detectives Chapoy and Flaherty of the Second Branch Bureau, early yesterday placed Mrs. Kastel under arrest at her apartment, and Mr. Kastel was taken into custody.

Little later at the Berkeley Hotel, where he has made his home recently, the other prisoner, described himself as Grant Rose, a motorman 27 years old, of No. 50 West 123rd street. He was arrested after a conference with his lawyer, which detectives say they overheard by the use of a microphone and which caused the District Attorney to order the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. Kastel.

The frame-up.

In his divorce action Mr. Kastel alleged he found Mr. Heller in the apartment with his wife after midnight on January 12. He said his wife was at that time attired in a dressing gown of Japanese make, and that when he entered she called up a man at the Gotham Hotel, asking him to come to her assistance.

Mr. Kastel further stated in his complaint that he was accompanied to the apartment of his wife on the night in question by Mr. Rose. The third man mentioned who was referred to as "Mr. Fitzmaurice," is said to be in Palm Beach at the present time.

When arrested Mr. Rose was taken to the District Attorney's office and is said by the detectives to have told Mr. Swann that Kastel induced him to go to the apartment of Mrs. Kastel on the night of January 12, telling him he would meet Mr. Heller there in the company of Mrs. Kastel.

Mr. Rose said Kastel arranged that he would attack Mr. Heller with a dagger and that Rose would interfere and apparently save Mr. Heller's life. Rose said he would have gone along as arranged had not Kastel thrown a vase at Mr. Heller striking him on the head.

Instead of using a knife, a fight ensued, according to Rose, after which as he was leaving the apartment house, he met "Mr. Fitzmaurice" coming in.

He then told the District Attorney that Kastel told him if he would help him "frame up his wife and Heller," he would pay him the money he owed him. He said Kastel told him it was easy, as, according to Rose's story, Kastel said he and his wife had done the same thing in Toronto and made $18,000 out of it.
