CHUMS INDEED.

Chams from boyhood, working together as men, rooming together then going together to the marriage altar. Berton M. Huff and William P. Nelson, of Marion, Ind., will next do their double turn in the courts of Grant county, Ind., as applicants for divorce. The defendants are sisters.

The cases are attracting much attention, and the courts will be crowded with friends of the "two couples."

Both the complaints are the same, both filed on the same day and the same legal counsel was engaged, but it remains to be seen whether the law will take up the endless chain of double incidents and grant a couple of divorces on the same day to Bert Huff and Will Nelson.

Their brides were the Misses Florence and Catherine Bleedinghiser, well known in Marion. They are of an excellent family. The young women are very attractive brunettes. They have two sisters, who are also prominent in Marion society.

Reds said that Messrs. Nelson and Huff and the Misses Bleedinghiser met at the same hour, on the same day, early in 1899, and the most im-

July 15th, 1902—Both husbands apply for divorce.

Both young wives will vigorously oppose the action of their husbands. The young women have returned to the home of their parents, and Messrs. Nelson and Huff have gone back together in bachelor quarters. A psychological study is suggested in the love of the men for each other and their devotion in order that they be together. It only remains for the two men to die together in the same day and be buried in one grave to round out their long gether in the same day and be buried in one grave to round out their long comradeship through school, trades and in love affairs and now up for the divorce court.

Another aditor's House.—
So much has been said about the new house we are going to build on our farm in the edge of town that we feel an explanation is due to the country. In the first place it is not to cost $50,000 or half that sum. It is not true that we said we were going to have the finest house in the State. The facts are these: We asked our wife one day if she wouldn't like a nine-room cottage with real plastering on the walis, a cistern, and a large front hall, with a stairway curving gracefully up to the second floor, and she said ad she wanted was a good roomy shack with plenty of closets, a big pantry, and a place where she could split the kindling without the neighbors seeing her. We may add that no charge hes been reade Anctaer Editor's House .bors seeing her. We may add that no charge has been made bors seeing her. We may add that no charge has been made in the plans then suggested, and there has been no further conversation about the matter. We will also state that we are not thinking of building a house. We couldn't raise the scads to build a one-story chicken coop, let alone a $50,000 mansion. We haven't got a farm, either here or anywhere else. If we had we'd go and live on it, or we'd sell it and use the money in getting out of this durined town, where half the people read our paper by borrowing it and the other naif take the paper and don't pay for it. That ought to hold these people who have been talking about us for a while.—Hickory Ridge Missourlan.

Trivial Suit That Has Occupied the

t Attenion of Many Judges. There is now in the United States Supreme Court for the second time a suit that has become famous because of the persistence of the par-ties concerned and the small sum involved. Eleven years ago a young man in the employ of the Wabash volved. man in the employ of the Wabash Railroad Company resigned, and his resignation was accepted. His month's wages was not paid, and he brought suit for them in the court of a St. Louis justice of the peace. He was given judgment for $81.08. The company took an appeal to the The company took an appeal to the circuit court of the city, but was again defeated. Then it carried the again defeated. Then it carried the case to the supreme court of the State of Missouri, which affirmed the decisions of the lower courts. Then, in the contention of the company that the courts of Missouri had failed to recognize the acts of the courts of a sister state, it was taken to the supreme court of the United States. Other complications came in through attachment proceedings by a creditor of the plaintiff against the road.

After the case had been on the docket of the supreme court for a year a decision was handed down affirming the decisions of the Missouri courts. Then a bill of inter-year a decision was handed down affirming the decisions of the Missouri courts. Then a bill of interpleader was put in by the company and a demurrer to the bill by the attorney for the plaintiff. For a second time the case came before the St. Lönis court of appeals, to still be decided against the company. Another motion for a hearing in the state supreme court was denied, but an application to Justice Brewer to have the case certified to the United States supreme court was granted, and there it is now for the second time awaiting adjudication. This was the first case of a young Missouri lawyer, and it has been the making of him. As he has won in every contention, the costs have fallen on the company, which has thus far pull out over $3,000 to save $81.98.—Chicago Chronicle.

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

The proper place for religious instruction is in the home and in the churches. Few parents who love their children would wish to surrender the sacred duty of instilling religion into their little hearts to a comparative stranger who might teach them any objectionable creed or doctrine. Our school teachers already have too much to do without adding to their burden. The next thing we know some enthusiast will rise up and demand that the teachers in Canadian schools be ordered to wash and dress their pupils.

SUME MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

Many and curious are the customs regarding brides. In Switzerland the bride on her wedding day will permit no one, not even her parents, to kus her upon the lips. In parts of rural England the cook pours hot water over the threshold after the bridal couple have gone, in order to keep itt warm for another bride, reports the Loudon Globe. The pretty custom of throwing the slipper originated in France. An old woman seeing the carriage of her young king—Louis XIII.—passing on his way from the church, where he had just been married, took off her shoe, and, flinging it at his coach, oried out, "The all I have, Your Majesty, but may the blessing of God go with it." There is an old superstition in Germany against marriages in May. A favvorite wedding day in Scotland is Dec. 31, so that the young couple can leave their old life with the old year and begin their married life with the new one. The Italians permit no wedding gifts that are sharp or pointed, connected with which practice is our superstition that the gift of a knife severs friend-Italians permit no wedding gifts that are sharp or pointed, connected with which practice is our superstition that the gift of a knife severs friendship. One beautiful marriage custom is that of the bride, immediately after the ceremony. Ilinging her bouquet among her maiden friends. She who catches it is destined to be the next bride.

WHY THEY DO NOT MARRY.

ewing Girls Have Fewer Chancer Than Their Sisters Generally.

Wonder has often been expressed at the number of sewing girls who never wed. The fact is that the girl who piles her needle for a liveood is out of the way of getting a husband. She does not come in contact with men in her work, as other girls do, and with so little time other girls do, and with so little time for anything but headwork she does not make the acquaintance of marriageable men. The very nature of her employment excludes men from her society during her working hours. Her associates, and even her employers, are almost invariably of her own sex. No class of women are more deserving of good husbands than are the women who make their living with their needles. They are usually modest, refined and domestic. They do not hunt husbands, and, being so witadrawn from the daily lives of men, husbands do not usually hunt them because they do not usually know of them.

Secret Marriage of One of Them to the Duke of Gloucester.

"In a drawing-room of one of the stateliest mansons of Pall-Mail, at an early hour of the evening of Sept. 6, 1766, a young and lovely woman was sitting alone. The house," writes Mr. A. W. Jarvis, in the Pall Mail Magazine, "was the town residence of Maria, Countess-Dowager of Waldegrave. The solitary occupant of the room was the Countess tone of the Misses Walpole), who, though she was the mother of three children, and had been a widow for about three years, was still in the flower and freshness of the girlish beauty that seven or eight years before had won for her the passionate love of a rich and powerful earl. Ere many moments had passed, a well-looking gentleman, whose slight figure and comely face entitled him to be described as a handsome boy, entered the room, greeting the lady affectionately. The gentleman was the Duke of Gloucester, brother of the reigning Sovereign. These two young people had been lovers-for many months. Fearful of exciting the King's opposition, they were about to be secretly married. Ten minutes later they were joined by the lady's domestic chaplain, the Rev. Robert Morton, who, prayer-book in land, proceeded to perform the office for which he had been invited. It was a scene for the stage. The bride was still a girl in appearance, and the boyleh bride-groom in his twenty-fourth year. The later was a bubl-table, littered with knick-knacks and the volumes of the last new novel. The time was between seven and nine in the evening, and the curtained drawing-room, that for the occasion did duty as a chapel, was lighted with a few candles. For five whole years the secret was fealously guarded." Duke of Gloucester.
