

On The Side

"Oh!!! That's my arm."

What the United States is sadly in need of is a greater length of time between railroad accidents.

If you want to get on the right side of that vaccinated friend of yours, well just keep on this right side.

J. Pierpont Morgan drew his check for $34,000,000 the other day and did not seem to regard it as much of a day either.

Monday's Growler asks the following question: If vaccination will prevent small-pox will rubbing your big toe stop toothache?

That rustling sound that was heard about the first of January has been heard again. The new leaves have been turned back again.

J. A. Wilson, of the Ingersoll pork packing establishment, was in the city yesterday, and called on J. A. Wilson, the Queen street grocer.

A Windsor man who had been legally pronounced dead has turned up. He had been living in Chatham and it made him feel like a new live man.

The Growler says that the reason Andrew Thomson, Jr., didn't have that record was that he was afraid if he was elected he would have to be vaccinated.

The Denver Post is authority for the statement that in the fashionable Back Bay District of Boston the chicken-pox is known as the "poultry eruption."

There would seem to be some injustice about the license law which prevents thirsty citizens of Chatham from getting a drink before 6 a. m., while over in South Africa, the British troops are taking their laagers at dawn.

PLAINT OF THE AUTHORS.

"What has become of the lady Who gave us 'To Have and to Hold,' Of which a million copies Were printed and bound and sold?"

"What's happened to 'David Harum' Who's reading that story now? Who remembers 'Richard Carvel' Oh, what did he do and how?"

"Ah, where is dear little Bertha And her 'Helmet of Navarre'? Perhaps they survive, but they're keeping well out of sight, if they are."

"And oh, was there not a story Called 'Alice of Somewhere,' say? It was hailed as the greatest, ever— Whose reading that tale today?"

"They're gone with the 'Robert Elsmere's,' And 'Tilly's' to dusty gloom— People turn to the counters, eager To give something else a boom."

"Alas for our masterpieces!" The sorrowing authors cry "They bring us the wealth of Midas, And forever forgotten lie."

UP THE RIVER.

A very interesting and varied entertainment was held on Friday evening in the school-house, S. S. 16, River Road, Harwich, Edward Langford occupied the chair. J. H. Cumming occupied the program with a fine selection from his graphophone. Miss Rena Langford's rendering of her solos deserve special mention, as do also Miss Daisy Doherty and Miss Mabel Arnold for the able way in which they entertained the audience with their recitations. Miss Myrtle Patterson is a host in herself. She acted as accompanist during the evening and her services were much appreciated. Peter Campbell and Claude McMillan have still to find their equals in the handling of their instruments. The Cumming Bros. deserve credit for the services of such fine talent and for providing such a successful evening.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

Montreal, Jan. 13.—There were about 700 head of butchers' cattle, 6 calves, 150 sheep and lambs offered for sale at the east end abattoir today. The butchers were present in larger numbers than on any market day since Christmas, and trade was good, with somewhat lower prices for all kinds of cattle excepting the best heaves. Prime heaves were rather scarce and sold at from $3-4 to $5-5c per lb; pretty good animals sold at from $1-2 to nearly $1-2c, and common stock at from $1-4 to $1-6c per lb. The two best real calves on the market were sold for $20, or a little over 5c per lb; others brought from 3c to 4c per lb. Sheep sold at from 3c per lb; lambs at from 4c to 4-1-4c. Fat hogs sold at from 6-14 to 6-2-4c per lb, weighed off the cars.

The man who can hardly crawl, and has just strength to get through a day's work, has no strength left for family life. He wants to be quiet; to be alone, out of sight and sound of everybody.

What a difference between such a man and the healthy, hearty man, who romps with his children and rides his laughing baby to 'Banbury Cross.'

What makes the difference? Usually disease of the stomach, involving the entire digestive and nutritive system.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. When these diseases are cured the hindrance to the proper nourishment of the body is removed and strength comes back again.

"I am happy to say I am getting to feel fine," writes Mr. A. J. Vandewater, of 773 West Division Street, Chicago, Ill. "I have taken six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and four or five vials of the little 'Pellies.' They have done me worlds of good. These medicines have brought the great change in me from a slow mope of a man that could hardly crawl, tired and sick all the time, and could do no work. Now I can work, sleep, eat, and feel fine, and that tired feeling is all going away. I am very thankful that I wrote to Dr. Pierce's 'Golden Medical Discovery' and his little liver 'Pellies' have almost made a new man of me. I feel young as I did at thirty years. No other doctor for me, only Dr. Pierce."

THE COMING OF WINTER.

Out of the northland sombre words are calling:
A shadow falleth southward day by day;
Sad summer's arms grow cold; his fire is falling:
His feet draw back to give the stern one way.

It is the voice and shadow of the slayer,
Slayer of loves, sweet world, slayer of dreams:
Make and thy voice with sober plaint and prayer;
Make grey thy woods and darken all thy streams.

Black grows the river, blacker drifts the eddy:
The sky is grey; the woods are cold below;
Oh, make thy bosom and thy lips ready
For the cold kisses of that falling snow.

"BROWN AND I."

How Two Jolly Young Canadians Suppered Costly Titles at the Recent Pan-American at Buffalo.

"My chum Brown and I spent our summer vacation at the Pan-American Exposition," said a jolly young Canadian who came to this city, the other day on business for a Montreal firm, says The New York Tribune, "and in a spirit of mischief we thought we would play a trick on the 'Yankees' by pretending we were British noblemen. We both could assume a good imitation of the most approved aristocratic accent, and, having heard a lot of the Americans' fondness for titles, we promised ourselves considerable fun."

"I introduced Brown as 'Sir Thomas May,' and he introduced me as 'Sir Arthur Banks,' though my real name is Dixon."

"Our first disappointment came when we could not find rooms in a first-class hotel in Buffalo, but had to be content with a third-rater. Our second disappointment came when we clearly perceived that our titles had only served to raise such suspicion in our landlord's breast that he demanded a week's room rent in advance. Our third came when we saw that our fellow guests were far too busily engaged in getting their money's worth to pay us anything like the attention we had hoped to attract."

"We could not very well abandon our fictitious titles, however, so we resolved to face it out, and we called one another 'Sir Thomas' and 'Sir Arthur' faithfully when speaking to third parties, though we felt rather silly over it. Nobody seemed impressed with us, and we were becoming thoroughly discouraged, when all at once a ray of light came."

"A London cockney waiter appeared at our table, and seemed so glad to meet two of his own countrymen in a foreign land that he could not do enough for us. He waited on us hand and foot, gave us our titles of 'Sir' at every breath, and occasionally dubbed Brown 'Me Lud.' We were delighted, and tipped him freely."

"The poor fellow came to our room that night, and asked to be allowed to act as our valet. We told him we were determined to rough it during our trip to America, and he was dressing ourselves. We allowed him, however, to brush all our clothes. He was so grateful that we tipped him heavily again."

"Next day the same thing was repeated, and by a few adroit questions I've learned that he was having a harder time getting a living in America than he anticipated, when he left 'old h'England,' and was likely to lose his job as waiter that very night unless he could bribe the head waiter with a $5 bill. He got it. The next day his wife was taken dangerously ill, and no hospital would receive her. He got that, too. Next day our vacation ended, and we started for home rather empty in pocket. Our friendly waiter packed our dress suit cases, and began another hard-luck story. We cut it short by saying that we had done enough for him already. His obsequious smile died out. With an impudent look, he said: 'Well, good-bye, Mr. Brown; good-bye, Mr. Dixon.' It was plain that he was 'on.' 'How did you find out?' we asked."

"'I went to a newspaper office and h'examined 'Banks's' Postage,' said he. 'I didn't find your titles there.' 'It was only a joke,' I replied. 'You won't blow on us, will you?' 'Not if I'm a bit of a loser myself,' said he, with another leer and a broad grin."

"A cruel suspicion took hold of me. 'Were all those hard-luck stories of yours fakes also?' I asked."

"'Fakes!' said he. 'But you cannot deny but what I giv' yer good valley in toilettes for yer scads,' said he."

First Resident of the University.

The Rev. Dr. McCaul, first President of the University of Toronto, received his first Canadian appointment in November, 1838, when he came out on the nomination of the Archbishop of Canterbury as Principal of Upper Canada College. Born in Dublin, his career as student and tutor at Trinity College in his native city had been most brilliant.

In 1842 he became Vice-President of King's College and professor of classics, logic, rhetoric and belles-lettres, and on the reorganization of the affairs of the college in 1849 Dr. McCaul was made its head under the new statute. Besides the reputation that still clings to his personality, he was the author of various editions of and essays on the classics, and for a while conducted a Canadian monthly magazine, which under the name of The Maple Leaf, had at one time a considerable popularity.

His Refusal.

"That man once offered me the money for my vote," remarked the practical politician.

"And you refused it with scorn?"

"I did. My conscience wouldn't permit me to take it. It wasn't more than half of what was customarily paid, and I couldn't have looked my fellow members of the legislature in the face if I had cut prices."

SMALLPOX REGULATIONS IN DOVER

So many ratepayers enquire, so many complain of the expense, and so many others complain that more is not done to stamp out the disease, that the Reeve of Dover has asked us to publish the statement of the Township Solicitor.

"We must obey the law," says Reeve Purser, "and therefore must enforce quarantine and see that all have proper care and the necessary expenses. We must pay for the keep of those unable to pay for themselves. But there are some who ask us to do what we have no power to do. Others ask us to let the Provincial Board of Health do what they please; but this would be expensive, and we prefer to spend amongst our own ratepayers what money we must spend in these matters."

Chatham, Ont., Jan. 14, 1902.

To the Reeve and Council of Dover: Gentlemen.—As instructed by you, I have corresponded with the Health Officer, with the hope of lightening the responsibilities and duties of your Municipality, but the Provincial Board of Health insists upon the regulations being strictly carried out.

Where small-pox exists in a municipality the Provincial Board of Health has, under the statute, power to insist upon the Local Board of Health exercising all the powers of vaccination, isolation and protection and care of patients and the public to prevent the spreading of the disease; and in the event of the Local Board of Health not doing this sufficiently, in the opinion of the Provincial Board, then the latter Board may, with the approval of the Minister in Toronto, exercise, at the expense of the Municipality, any of the powers of the Local Board.

Where the Local Board has authority to direct anything to be done by a person or corporation it has power to require the person or corporation to pay for it, and the amount thereof may be levied as municipal taxes.

Under the statute, where small-pox exists in any municipality, the Health Officers or Local Board of Health is required to use all possible care to prevent the spread of the infection or contagion, and under Section 59 of the Health Act, the Provincial Board of Health may make effective provision by removing persons to pest houses or by quarantining, and by providing nurses and other assistance and necessaries to prevent the spread of the disease and to care for persons sick or quarantined.

The law also provides that these regulations may be carried out by force through police or otherwise.

The law also provides that if the municipality or local Board of Health will not exercise their powers and carry out these provisions then the Provincial Board of Health may take charge of the matter, and the expense of what may be done will be borne by the municipality.

My experience in former cases shows that it is much less expensive for the local Board and the municipality to carry out these provisions than for the Provincial Board to do it.

The Provincial Board has been urging stringent regulations and has been insisting upon not only everything that you have done, but also that you should close the schools and churches and that you should also prevent elections for school or municipal purposes.

You wisely arranged for the re-election of your public body without a canvass or poll, and that got rid of the one difficult question.

The Provincial Board is urging still that the schools and churches should be closed these provisions that the Provincial Board of Health may take charge of the matter, and the expense of what may be done will be borne by the municipality.

I am still corresponding with the Provincial Board and explaining to them the Provincial Board your inability and want of power to close schools or churches.

You have so far as I can learn done nothing in the matter except what the law requires you to do and which would have been done by the Provincial Board of Health if you had not done it; and this would have been more expensive to the municipality.

On the other hand you have done everything which so far as I am aware is reasonably necessary for the purpose, although you have not closed the schools and churches, and I am of the opinion that you have not power to close them. They are controlled by the school trustees and the church authorities.

Yours truly,
MATTHEW WILSON.
