Sudden drops of temperature are impossible in the home heated by hot water. Stove fires die out, hot air furnaces heat unevenly, and the hot air switches to other parts of the house leaving the remaining rooms cold and drafty. But with the heating system of the

Oxford Hot Water Heater

In connection with Oxford Radiators an even, steady circulation of hot water is kept up throughout the house. Each radiator is diffusing the same temperature of heat in sufficient quantities for the size of the room.

The illustration below shows that the distance from the fire to the first surface is less than in any other made, and the water has a shorter distance to travel, thus a more equal temperature is maintained in the water of the several sections.

Write for our booklets, they are of interest to everyone with a home to heat.

CALLING AND DRESSING.

Look as Charming as Possible When Paying Visits.

We may all condemn from time to time the vain woman who devotes a large portion of her time to planning her wardrobe and posing before the looking glass, but is there anything more really provoking than the woman who never thinks it worth while to "dress up?"

We invite her to spend the evening with us, and we assume some extra anxieties for the occasion, and then she comes in wearing her ordinary attire. We must excuse it, she says. She really did not have time to change after coming home from business. Or else she placidly apologizes, assuring us that she really expected a purely informal call, and she hopes we will not mind it. She runs away early, for she has been so busy and is so tired.

It is even more exasperating when she says nothing, leaving us to infer that she did not think it worth while to do pretty things for us to look at. A damp at once descends on the occasion. We wonder at our own absurdity in sprucing ourselves up and almost always feel a grudge against the visitor for her tactlessness.

The popular girl is the one who complements her hostess by trying to look as fresh and charming as possible. She should of course avoid the other extreme of overdressing, but should certainly discard everyday attire and put on something suggestive of festivity. Philadelphia Ledger.

DAINTY LAMP SHADE.

It Costs but Little to Make and Produces a Charming Effect.

When the lamp is lighted at night, the lamp shade becomes a very conspicuous object, and for that reason it should be a pretty affair that will reflect credit upon the taste of the household. Lamp shades need not be expensive to be artistic. They may be beautiful and cost but a trifle, comparatively speaking. The one shown in the illustration may be made of materials which in other ways have outlived their usefulness and are lying idle in bureau drawers. To make this shade buy a simple paper design ready made and cover with soft green, yellow, scarlet or violet silk, finishing with puffs. If extra elaboration is wanted, trace designs with narrow ribbons, as shown in the picture. But the ribbon design is not necessary to a charming effect, which is easy to attain.

SILK LAMP SHADE.

To Make Chocolate.

The daughter of a certain New York household is the chocolate maker of the family, and the drink as she serves it is especially delicious. Her secret, which she willingly gives away, lies, she says, solely in the fact that the chocolate is broken into pieces, put in an earthenware vessel and slowly dissolved in warm water whose heat is gradually increased till the boiling point is reached, and it is allowed to boil for fifteen minutes. The porcelain or earthenware vessel in which it is cooked is then closely covered and left to stand on some warm but not hot part of the range for several hours. Just before it is to be served boiling milk is added and the mixture brought to a quick boil. By this process the chocolate is thoroughly blended, and that smooth, rich flavor from which all raw taste is taken is produced.—Harper's Bazar.

Bed hangings are again in fashion. The daintiest and lightest of colorings are used for them, from white madras nets, tambour muslins, soft India silk, to brocades in all their exquisite pastel shades. There are also the aesthetic and quaint colorings both of design and dye or the more conventional patterns that will ever retain a meed of popularity. The textures for the hangings are beautiful. Tambour sets are delightful, with draperies of the same. The French white work is exceedingly decorative, with curtains of a much thinner material. Japanese fabrics are always popular and can be had in pure white, with a knotted fringe, or in tan or tea colored silk edged with lace of the same shade. Bedspreads and pillow shams of lace over colored hangings tone with the hangings. Spreads of old hand woven linen with borders of antique lace are being used again by those who are fortunate to possess them. London Express.

The Children's Lunch Box.

What is the morning at school to a small child without a lunch box? What fun it is to open it and have the recess hour partly taken up in the consuming of a dainty sandwich and a bright red apple and enjoying every minute of what to them is a hard earned rest. Now, the lunch box or basket should first of all be neat in appearance, so the child may not be ashamed to bring it out before his friends. A basket is really the best from a sanitary standpoint, for it not only looks neat, but may be kept neat and clean inside and out by frequent washings, which is not the case with boxes. The basket should be washed about once a week and dried thoroughly in the sunlight if possible, and then it will always be sweet and clean.

Fortune Telling

does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health. There is many a woman whose future seems absolutely unclouded who is marked by her own condition for future disappointment and distress.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health may be retained or regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, drives the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Miss M. F. of Orla, Ontario, "and my health has been the means of restoring me to good health again, which I had not had for over three years, and taking your medicine. I thank you very much for your kind and prompt attention to my letter asking advice."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases. Do not accept an unknown and unproved substitute in its place.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the complexion and sweeten the breath.

DANGER SPOTS IN A STORM.

Places to Avoid When the Lightning is Flashing.

Out of doors trees should be avoided in a thunderstorm, and if from the rapidity with which the explosion follows the flash it is evident that electric clouds are near at hand a recumbent posture is the safest. It is seldom dangerous to take shelter under sheds, carts or low buildings or under the arch of a bridge, and a distance of twenty or thirty feet from tall trees or houses is an eligible situation, for should a discharge take place these elevated bodies are most likely to receive it.

It is well also to avoid water, for it is a good conductor, and the height of a human being near the stream may determine the direction of a discharge. Within doors we are tolerably safe in the middle of a carpeted room or when standing on a thick hearth rug. The chimney should be avoided on account of the conducting power of the carbon deposited in it, and gilt moldings or bell wires are sources of risk. In bed we are tolerably safe, since blankets and feathers are bad conductors.

It is injudicious to take refuge in a cellar, because the discharge is often from the earth to a cloud, and buildings frequently sustain the greatest injury in their basements.

DEATH OF PROF. CHAPMAN.

Former Member of Toronto University Staff lives in England.

News was received in Toronto the other day of the death in England of Prof. Chapman, for so many years on the staff of the University of Toronto, and who, after retiring from the active work of teaching and inheriting a property in England, went several years ago to reside there. The late E. J. Chapman, Ph. D., LL.D., whose death occurred at The Pines, Hampton Wick, England, on January 28th, was well known among the higher educationists of Canada, and particularly of Toronto. Following a military career for some time, he served in the Foreign Legion of the French army in the Algerian campaign, and his service as an officer on the Geological Surveys of Austria and Germany led him into his chosen profession, for in 1853 he received the appointment to the chair of Mineralogy and Geology at the University of Toronto, a post which he ably filled until the year 1896. Several distinguished men received their appointment to the professoriate of Toronto University at the same time, among them being the late Sir Daniel Wilson, Prof. Ormer, Prof. Hincks, and Prof. Cherriman. Although an octogenarian, the late Prof. Chapman retained mental and bodily vigor to the last.

Shortly before his death he was engaged in issuing a book which he had just seen through the press. He was the author of a large number of papers containing the results of original observations in his own field of work. Amongst his books were textbooks on Canadian Minerals and a textbook on Blow-Pipe Work, another being on the Geology of Ontario. The original papers are scattered among various societies and publications of England, Canada and the United States. He was a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, and received the degree of Ph. D. from Munich. Prof. Chapman was twice married, and his widow, who survives him, was a Miss Sutherland, an artist well known in Toronto. His son by his first wife died several years ago. He leaves no relatives in Canada.

Pleasant Memories of Canada.

"Traveling in Canada," writes Mr. Joseph Hinton in The New Graphic, England, Chronicle, "you notice with what fondness the colonists link their settlements with the Mother Country. Here in a letter from a Mr. Trumper you have mention of London, in the county of Middlesex, and a village on the River Thames. I know that River Thames. It is only a little stream. I saw it from on, and with toboggans dashing down upon it from a great height. It recalled to me the Thames backwater at home when I saw it later in the summer. On my way, by a freight train from Montreal to Quebec, a benevolent guard pulled his train up to get me some supper—I am not sure whether it was London, or Newcastle, or Bristol, but it had a high sounding name. Ere this it may have become a town or city, for it was admirably situated, with good transit service by rail and water. At that time, some five and twenty years ago, it consisted, so far as I could see, of an inn, a sawmill, and a little graveyard. The guard of the train, who had discovered myself and a friend lonely and tired and having eaten our little store of provisions obtained at Montreal, delighted our hearts with a right hearty hospitality; got us a brace of birds, a loaf of bread, a bottle of whiskey, and some fruit—though he had to stop his train and knock up the roadside inn to do it. And when we asked the cost of it, which we did as delicately as a proper appreciation of our treatment would permit, did he give us the bill? Not he! He smiled pleasantly, offered us a cigar case, and said he was only too pleased to have the company of two Englishmen on his freight train, and, moreover, that he had discovered by the names on our baggage that one of us was the namesake of a great English ballad composer, some of whose relatives lived on his line and were his friends. And then one of us had to explain that not to our knowledge we were related, but that we knew the fine old melodist well, that we had tried to knock up a relationship but had failed, that at the same time our admiration for him was of the most exalted character, and so on, and his name was J. L. Hatton, who wrote 'Good-bye Sweetheart,' 'To Anthea,' and scores of other famous compositions. At Quebec the Canadian guard helped us to carry our bags, found us a comfortable hotel, and left upon our memories impressions of Canada that were not diminished by the club hospitality and the intense British patriotism we encountered everywhere. And what a wonderful country, what vast, unoccupied, picturesque, open spaces, what rivers, what forests, what possibilities of prosperity and power!"

A Ruse Canadian Dead.

Alexander McGibbon, Inspector of Northwest Indian Agencies, who is dead at Calgary, at the age of 75, was formerly a well-known merchant in Montreal. An energetic Scotchman, he was president of the St. Andrew's Society there, and took part in many public demonstrations. He was in charge of the transport of stores during the Rebellion of 1835, and was for years in the Montreal Field Battery, commanded by Col. A. A. Stevenson. Subsequently he received his permanent appointment in the West from Sir John Macdonald's Government, and has lived there since.

PRETTY LIPS.

Falling, Pinching and Biting Them Will Surely Deform Them.

To be really pretty the lips should be rather full, but without the least suspicion of thickness. Their color, too, should be of bright red, not only for appearance's sake, but also as denoting a healthy body. Thin, colorless lips betray poverty of the blood, while very thin lips, however bright their color, show an irritable, pretty disposition.

So many girls when reading pull and pinch their lips. This bad habit causes the flesh to swell, and in a very short time a pair of ugly, thick lips is the result. Unfortunately this unbecoming blemish is not easy to cure. The practice of touching the lips must first be abandoned and the lips gently rubbed with cold cream two or three times a day. The girl who unconsciously plays with her lips will do well to wear a pair of woolly gloves when reading or studying. She should also get those around her to correct her directly they notice her hand raised to her face. Biting the lips is another habit which also thickens them besides denoting a bad temper. The best cure for this is to keep a white bone penholder in the mouth in moments of leisure, and this will prevent the teeth closing on the lips.

THE NURSERY.

A hot bath is the time honored remedy for a child in convulsions.

Good literature that is interesting and adapted to the small minds should be plentifully supplied for the children. Almost every child has some ear for music, and it will improve if it is encouraged, so teach it some simple little songs to sing about the house.

Remember that milk is sufficient nourishment for a child until it reaches the age of a year, and do not be tempted to give him "just a taste" of table food.

A trained nurse suggests substituting for the familiar powder puff used after the baby's bath a piece of absorbent cotton. Discard for a fresh piece as often as required.

Do not let a little child be frightened under any circumstances, and do not disappoint it if you can possibly avoid it. The griefs of childhood are very bitter, sometimes laying the foundation for ill health in after years.

When a man parades his own virtues there is given evidence of the smallness of their number.
