CARTS IN SCOTLAND.

They Were a Cause of Wonder in the Eighteenth Century.

In Scotland at the beginning of the eighteenth century produce was carried in sacks on horseback or on sledges, or later in the century—on tumblers, which were sledges on "tumbling" wheels of solid wood with wooden axletrees, all revolving together. These machines were often so small that in a narrow passage the cart could lift them bodily, for they held little more than a wheelbarrow. They had wheels a foot and a half in diameter, made of three pieces of wood joined together like a butter flin and which quickly wore out and became utterly shapeless, so that a load of 600 pounds was enormous for the harsh animals to drag. Yet even these vehicles were triumphs of civilization when they came into use when the century was young.

Carts are a later invention still, and in 1723, first carried by the tiny id of coals from East Kilbride to umbusling, "crowds of people," it is reported, "went to see the wonderful machine. They looked with surprise and returned with astonishment." In many parts of the lowlands they were not in ordinary use, even till 1760, while in the northern districts sleds or creels on the backs of women were chiefly employed to the end of the century. The wretched condition of the roads was the chief cause of the reluctant adoption of carts.

In the driest weather the roads were unfit for carriages and in wet weather almost impassable, even for horses—deep in ruts of mire, covered with stones, winding up heights and down hills to avoid swamps and bogs. It was this precarious state of the roads which obliged judges to ride on circuit, and a practice began as a physical necessity was retained as a dignified habit, so that in 1744 Lord Dun resigned his judgeship because he was no longer able to "ride on circuit."—Scottish Review.

LIFE IN ANCIENT GREECE.

No Remains Whatever of Grecian Domestic Architecture.

Of the domestic architecture of the Greeks nothing whatever remains, writes Jean Schoepfer in the Architectural Record Magazine. In ancient Greece private houses never had any architectural interest. A citizen of Athens or Sparta was too busy with state affairs to spend much time at home. He wanted to be in the public place where he could find his friends and fellow citizens. Moreover, the climate allowed him to live in the open air during the greater part of the year. It was on the agora that the citizens assembled in public meeting. It was there, from a rostrum, that the orators harangued the crowd; hence the need of a good voice and a clear enunciation; hence, too, the famous pebbles of Demosthenes. It was in the open air that Socrates and the sophists held their discussions alongside the llyssus, under the plane trees or on a public place. It was in the academy gardens that Plato patronized and in open air gymnasia that the youths practiced their athletic games. There was no reason d'être for a domestic architecture with such a people and in such a climate. It is not necessary to have palatial administrative buildings for governing a people that live in the public places. Besides, what significance would the term comfort, which is so full of meaning to us twentieth century westerners, living in cold, damp climates where fog, wind and rain prevail during half the year—what sense, we ask, would this word have for the robust Greeks of the fifth century B. C., whose children Aristophanes pictures to us on their way to school beheaded, in spite of the falling snow, and singing as they go?

LOOKING TO WINTER.

Autumnal Renovation of Heat and Light Apparatus.

It is after vacation days are ended that the real home life begins and we wish everything at its freshest and best for the season of good cheer that is to follow. Merchants and manufacturers understand this, and infinite pains are taken to have ready the latest findings and conveniences for the autumnal shopper.

When the house has been thrown wide open to the sun and air after its whole or partial closing for the summer the first thing is to go over it carefully, taking account of stock to see what needs repairing or what should be replaced. And just here it should be remembered that it is the poorest kind of economy to put a large amount of money into the repair of something that is not good of its kind or that has long since served its purpose when a little additional outlay will replace it with something far better.

This applies particularly to the plumbing and heating. There is no middle road between good plumbing and bad. If there is the slightest doubt as to its integrity, have it attended to at once.

Range and Furnace. Are the pipes damp and rusty of either furnace or stove? Replace them now ere the cold weather comes on and the notice from the "priestess of the kitchen" on some cold winter's morning that "the pipes is burst on me an' the fire won't burn" brings widespread consternation in its wake.

Is the lining to the kitchen range all right? Do the various drafts and dampers do their allotted work? Does the stove smoke or the oven fail to bake? Consider it carefully. If the cracks can be closed with cement or a new lining be put in with the assurance that nothing more is needed, well and good. If, on the contrary, you are running the chance of being inconvenienced all winter long, economize on something else and get a new, first class, guaranteed stove with all the latest improvements. If the old furnace is out of repair, now is the time to replace it with one that is new and not liable to leave you in the lurch in the dead of winter.—Ladies' World.

A STRONG HEART AND STEADY NERVES

Very important it is in this age of competition to have a clear cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves. Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of the average business man—his heart and nerve system will not stand it—he gives them too much work to do. Women also are doing the same thing attending to their household duties and looking after their social obligations. The constant strain under which they have to continue day in and day out, the irregularities of habits and loss of rest will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long you become nervous, starting at the least sudden sound, the heart flutters and palpitates, speaks float before the eyes, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, you have faint and dizzy spells, lack of self-confidence, rush of blood to the head, irritability of temper, shortness of breath, starting in sleep, sensation of pins and needles, sleeplessness, restlessness and finally physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

are the remedy you require to restore your strength and health. Their extraordinary curative power manifests itself immediately they are taken. Through the medium of the nervous system they impart a strengthening and restorative influence to every organ and tissue of the body. Many have been cured among them being Mr. Ray V. Coomer, Wellington, P.E.I., Mrs. E. Kilmer, Humberston, Ont., Mrs. C. McDonald, Portage la Prairie, Man., Mr. Walter Cleveland, Baywater, N.S., Mrs. Owen Martin, Alma, N.B., and thousands of others.

The price of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is 50 cts. per box or 3 boxes for $1.50. Can be procured at all drug and general stores, or will be sent on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Humor and Philosophy

THE ONLY WAY.

We are a hustling people, we—Determined to arrive; To get where we show can see We strenuously strive. We want to be of those that win, Of those that take the pay, And this creates the butter-in- When there's no other way.

Of course it's nice to be of those Unto the manner born, Who are a part of all the shows And never left forlorn. But they are few who stand within Dame Fortune's favored ray, So you must be a butter-in- When there's no other way.

Much talk there is of dignity, Of cultivated pride, But he who banks on these you'll see Ignobly shoved aside. There are some things you'll hate like sin They'll make your hair turn gray, But it's up to the butter-in- When there's no other way.

The man who stands in pensive pose Is jostled by the throng; Crushed are his corns and bumped his nose. His patient wait is long. Bewildered by the clang and din, He'll in the end be glad to find Unless he turns a butter-in- When there's no other way.

Modern Weapon.

If Cupid were up to date instead of going around with a back number bow and arrow the chubby little unadorned mischief maker would hang them on the wall as relics and get a neat little shopping bag filled with love microbes. Then when the young man was loosened ing up and buying two small glasses of red lemonade the little chap could slip up behind and drop a few microbes in each glass and they would do the rest.

Strange that as bright a boy as Cupid never thought of that before. If instead of fiddling around like an Indian he would bring science to his aid he could have the whole world married off in about four weeks. Then he could spend the other eleven months in sack cloth and ashes repenting what he had done. As it is, he is kept so busy that he gets no time to repent.

The Secret.

No wonder that the man who sits Around the livery stable To settle the affairs of state Offhanded quite are able. They have a chance without expense To get first hand much good horse sense.

Proved It to Him.

"He has written a great play." "How does he know it is so wonderful?" "No one will produce it for him."

Theoretical Knowledge.

"He can't understand why the boys do not remain on the farm." "Was he never there?"

Help Him Up.

Oh, pity the man with a jag on. Who sees snakes and bugs and a dragon! Oh, lend him a hand And help him to land High up on the tall water wagon!

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The reason why some people can't train their minds is because they have no material to work on. Boys who sass back are apt to get their punishment by growing up into married men who darent.

Patience, perseverance and practice are the winning cards that widows bank on.

The man who lives in a boarding house is apt to think that the whole world is full of prunes.

The easier a man falls in love the bigger chunks of experience he accumulates.

A new engagement ring makes a girl wonderfully fond of calling upon her acquaintances. If we could all of us reach the top it wouldn't be the top.

Some people can't take a vacation because they haven't anything to vacate.

No sane man was ever in love, but that doesn't disconcert the lover.

Opportunity is a knocker that people like to meet.

A Claim For Lost Beauty.

Monsieur Durand, a respectable middle-aged citizen of a French provincial garrison town, says The Figaro, is married to a charming lady of prepossessing appearance. The couple led a quiet and contented life together until one day last month, when Madame Durand left home to go to church.

On the road an officer of the dragons came cantering along. Whether it was Madame's bright red dress or the nodding white feathers in her hat, has not yet been fully established, but the officer's horse first shied, then got out of hand, and rushing at the approaching figure, knocked Madame Durand down. The poor lady was badly bruised and became unconscious. Conveyed home, it was found that her face was badly lacerated, necessitating several stitches. A month passed, and notwithstanding the surgeon's skill, scars remained which permanently disfigured Madame's beauty.

The husband has now instituted legal proceedings against the officer who rode the horse for damages, the claim being worked in the following quaint terms: "Whereas complainant, whose wife's beauty of face is now completely marred, has suffered the loss of the enjoyment of the said beauty through defendant's culpable action, plaintiff desires himself entitled to compensation."

After this, it may cause some surprise that the value at Mr. Durand assesses his loss is—$100.

The story is told of an old Roman hero who desired to found a great city, and for a sum of gold he purchased from a barbarian tribe as much land as he could cover with the skin of an ox. By cutting the hide skillfully into one long strip, he encompassed enough space to establish a city. The human race is full of little tubes, which are called sweat-glands. If all these glands were unwrapped and laid end to end, they would be long enough to fence in an area of over a square mile! When they are all working properly they rid the body of two quarts of sweat every day. If they are not, the surface of the skin is not kept clean and the mouths of these minute tubes open and free, all the substances excreted from the blood will be forced back into the system. Suitable bathing and rubbing will keep the outside clean, but the inside also needs attention. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and "Pleasant Pellets" relieve the glands of unnecessary work, by opening up the bowels and kidneys. The strain is relieved; the bloom of youth returns; the mind feels clearer, and the body becomes stronger and more able to resist disease.

The common sign of the business man's slavery is "weak stomach," the natural consequence of the rapid eating, the indigestible pastry, the coffee and pie or doughnuts, with which many a man stuffs his stomach under the name of "quick lunch." The quickest way back to a strong stomach and sound health is to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery until perfectly cured.

The Robber Robbed.

"I remember a long time ago," said a burglar, "going late one night into a room in which there was one man sleeping. His clothes were on a chair near the head of the bed. I was bending over these clothes and about to take them out to the hall when the man suddenly woke up. Without a moment's hesitation he threw his arms around me and was young then and strong, but this man was four times as strong as I was. I think he could have crushed me to a jelly if he had wanted. As it was he put me out of the house with the greatest ease. But before he did that he carried me over to the table and it a'ight. As he looked at me my watch chain caught his eye, and, do you know, that man took my watch and chain and kept them!"—London Tit-Bits.

SLEEPING PORCHES.

A NEW IDEA IN THE SCHEME FOR OUTDOOR LIFE.

Eight Hours More of Fresh Air Out of Every Twenty-four—Denver Makes the Sleeping Porch an Architectural Feature.

My friend—a Denver attorney—smiled and stretched in modest appreciation of my congratulations upon his evidently fine physical condition.

"Yes," he said, "I've been sleeping outdoors for about six months now."

"Oh, no; on the porch?" he explained.

"Just take as you see from below—and nobody can see me from below—and go to sleep. Have got my wife into the habit of it, too, and I don't know whether we can go back inside for the winter or not. It seems mighty stuffy there." He paused.

"Gives me eight hours more fresh air out of the twenty-four, you understand," he added. "That means a lot to a man shut up as I am in an office." Right he was; so here presented itself a fact—"fact" it might be styled—that appeared worth looking into.

Denver builds its porches both on the front and on the back of the house. However, the back porch is not delivered over entirely, as might be expected, to mop and pails and other kitchen and cleaning utensils and debris, but is apt to be a two story affair, with a railing around the second story and a door opening into it or upon it from within. Here is a splendid place for dusting rugs and clothing and for sunning whatever at the moment requires to be sunned. Here is a fine place to sit and write or read or watch the ever changing mountains, invisible, perchance, from the front porch. And here is a grand place to sleep at night.

The average Denverite when asked if many people of the city sleep out of doors is apt to confuse the practice to invalids. As is well known, the chief element in fighting tuberculosis is fresh air—fresh air and pure air every moment. Therefore the invalids who are sent to Colorado have their instructions. Many sleep in tents, and it is not unusual to read the advertisement in, say, a Denver paper, "Wanted—By man and wife, a room with sleeping porch," and so on.

Thus introduced maybe by the weak, the sleeping porch practice is assuredly extending among the strong. Denver is witnessing houses being built
