A Montague correspondent of the Patriot gives an account of an accident resulting from careless handling of a gun, which might have proved very serious. The particulars appear to be about as follows: A Mr. Martin, of St. Mary's Road, was going to Montague Bridge with a load of potatoes; he was walking near his horse and Mr. LeBlanc, a neighbor, was walking beside him. In front of this cart was another empty cart, and as they were beside him. In front of this cart was another empty cart, and as they were going along a Mr. Munn, who was carrying a loaded gun, jumped into the empty cart to get a lift, first putting in the gun. No sooner had he got into the cart than the gun went off, driving the charge through the tail-board of the cart and into the nose,
