Calveston's Disaster Retrieved.

The recent storm in Calveston and the success of the sea-wall in preventing a repetition of the 1900 disaster has drawn upon that city the attention of the nation. The former storm destroyed 10,000 people in a night and swept half the city bare; the latter of equal violence wrought slight injury to property and none to life within the city limits and in the territory protected by the Wall. With half its population lost through death and flight in 1900 and many of those who stayed, without home or resources, the stricken city set an example of courage and character to the country and the world. To rebuild the city they had first to rebuild confidence; that could only be achieved by making its site invulnerable to the waves by a tide-proof barrier. As the east end of the island on which Calveston is built narrows to a point, the city stretches about five miles west along the gulf, and hence a wall high and strong enough to resist the highest and most violent flood was a stupendous undertaking. As the city level was only a few feet above mean tide, it was necessary to grade the entire surface to the level of the wall and raise the buildings accordingly. All this Calveston has done and more. The wall serves as a magnificent boulevard 100 feet wide which, looking out upon tide and beach, is in situation and construction superior to the famous sea drive at Ostend.

Not only has a city of 50,000 people accomplished all this in a few years but it has found itself in excellent financial condition at the end of it. The commission plan of government, which is Calveston's gift to the nation, enabled the five commissioners, by strictly business methods, to double and often triple expenditures without any notable increase of taxation. The absolute exclusion of politics and party and the narrowing of the number of the officials to be selected, simplified the task of the electors in choosing the most competent men, and precluded the waste that necessarily accompanies the rewarding of partisans. It is found that the vast expenditure on the five miles of sea-wall and the raising of the city surface have already come back to the city in the enhanced value of real estate and the general stimulus that the confidence inspired by the new rampart has given to commerce and business.

The success of this enterprise has encouraged the city to undertake a greater one. The flood of 1900 swept away the two-and-a-half mile arched bridge to the mainland, and temporary railroad trestle that was then built has been destroyed by last week's storm. Already Calveston City and County, in conjunction with the railroad and trolley lines, had signed a contract to lay down a solid causeway 130 feet wide and nearly three miles long. This will carry two railroad tracks, a trolley line, roadway, motorway, and walking paths. It is to be built so high and solid as to be proof against wind or tide. The successful resistance of the sea wall will give new courage to the builders.

Calveston is a typical American city, nearly every civilized nation and every State of the Union having contributed to its citizenship. That Northern States are well represented is evidenced by the fact that more than once sent to Washington the sole Republican Congressman from Texas. Some of the elements that chiefly contributed to its character and growth will have special interest for Catholic readers. Though it cannot be called a Catholic city it was founded by Catholics and Catholics now constitute about one-third of its population. Galvez, from whom it is named, the Spanish Governor of Louisiana and later of Mexico and California, was an earnest Catholic. Col. Michel Mansard, president of the Calveston Developing Company and the founder of modern Calveston, brought with him from his native Canada, faith and zeal as well as enterprise, and one of his first acts was to donate to Mgr. Olin, first Bishop of Calveston, the best resident block in the city for educational purposes in 1854. The bishop at once erected a substantial building.

France has deserved well of our Republic and particularly of the Catholic Church in the United States. It gave not only our greatest pioneer priests and early bishops but often the funds with which they built churches and schools and carried on their missionary work. From the French Society of the Propagation of the Faith, from his friends in France and the French planters of Louisiana, Bishop Olin obtained the means to erect St. Mary's University, the second educational institution in Texas.

A True Nobleman.

The lately deceased Marquis of Ripon was a true nobleman as well in his actual life as by rank in the British peerage. Before his conversion to Catholicity many years ago he held high office in the Freemason Order which, of course, he withdrew from on or before his reception into the Church. At his funeral service the eloquent Father Bernard Vaughan, S. J., pronounced the eulogy, in the course of which he noted as follows the earnest and simple piety that marked the character of the man:

Great men are very simple. He, who was so ardent a politician, so keen a sportsman, and so ready a conversationalist upon a wide range of subjects, a Cabinet Minister and a foreign Viceroy, was in his spiritual life as simple as the child put before us by Our Lord in the Gospel. He loved such pious practices as putting up a penny candle before Our Lady's statue, placing a flower from his buttonhole at her feet, and telling her beads, and singing her hymns with a heart brimful of joy. His crucifix he liked to hold in the hollow of his hand, pressing it with pious ejaculations to his lips. Was he not a Catholic to his finger-tips? Characteristic of him was the incident which I must tell you. Shortly before he breathed his last, his chaplain attempted to draw from his hand a crucifix that he might bless him with it, but our dying friend looked up, smiled, and with both his hands clasped his cross as though he meant to say, "I cannot part with it for a moment." When the end came, like a child falling asleep, he closed his eyes for ever to this world, but he opened them to see the smile of the Master he served so loyally. May we not believe he heard the word: "Well done, well done, enter into the joy of thy Lord?" Truly a nobleman in the best sense.

A Remarkable Catholic Family.

In connection with the appointment of Mgr. John Vaughan as Auxiliary Bishop of Salford (England) it is noted that the new prelate belongs to a family many members of which have been and several still are distinguished in high offices in the Church. The lay-head of the family is Colonel Vaughan of Courtfield. The Colonel's elder brother was the late Cardinal Archbishop, the founder of St. Joseph's Foreign Missionary Society, Mill Hill College, Westminster, Basilica, and St. Bede's College, Manchester. Another brother was the late William Bede Vaughan, Archbishop of Sydney, a man of great intellectual power. The apostolic Father Renselm Vaughan, who passed away so recently, was another brother. The next brother was Prior Jerome Vaughan, O. S. B., who collected £30,000 with which he built and founded the Abbey and School of Fort Augustus. Father Bernard Vaughan, the distinguished Jesuit, another brother, shares in most ample measure the ability of the family, as does Monsignor John Vaughan, the Bishop-Elect. Another brother is M. Rignold Vaughan, of Glas-Trotty, Monmouthshire. Five sisters all became nuns of various Orders.

It would be hard to find a family which has given such practical manifestation of its devotion to the old Faith—N. Y. Freeman's Journal.

Great Mexican Church.

(From the Mexican Herald.)

Larger than Westminster, larger even than St. Paul's, is the Church of Santo Domingo. This great edifice, renowned in many countries, is known not only for its size but for the beauty and magnificence of its decorations and the many historic events entwined in its history. The church was built on consecrated ground, having been the site of the martyrdom of two Dominican priests.

When the struggle with the French began it was not long until Oaxaca was in the hands of a French army. Santo Domingo was turned into a barracks and the gold decorations, the fine paintings, and costly adornments were ruthlessly stripped from her walls. The friars were driven out and for six years the church was a fort and nothing more. The accumulated grandeur of three hundred years was undone in a few brief months. The greater part of the structure is still used by the Federal garrison.

Minard's Liniment cures Neuralgia.

Palpitation of the Heart.

One of the first danger signals that announce something wrong with the heart is the irregular beat or violent throbbing. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all gone" sinking feeling; or again, there may be a most violent beating, with flushings of the skin and visible pulsations of the arteries. The person may experience a smothering sensation, gasp for breath and feel as though about to die. In such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is, beyond all question, marvellous. They give such prompt relief that no one need suffer.

Mrs. Arthur Mason, Marlbank, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies but got none to answer my case like your pills did. I can recommend them highly to all with heart or nerve trouble."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price, by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A Sensible Merchant.

Mrs. Fred Laine, St. George, Ont., writes:—"My little girl would cough so at night that neither she nor I could get any rest. I gave her Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and am thankful to say it cured her cough quickly."

The milkman stood before her, nervously twisting his hat in his hands. "So," she said, sternly, "you have come at last?"

"Yes, madam. You sent for me, I believe," he replied.

"I wished to tell you that I found a minnow in the milk yesterday morning."

"I am sorry, madam; but if the cows will drink from the brook instead of from the trough I cannot help it."

"It is much easier to obtain a standing in society than it used to be. I can't see how you figure that out."

"Why, one can live in a one story shanty now and be respected, if it is merely called a bungalow."

There is nothing harsh about Lax-Liver Pills. They cure Constipation, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, and Bilious Spells without griping, purging or sickness. Price 25c.

A kind old gentleman, seeing a very small boy carrying a lot of newspapers under his arm, was moved to pity.

HEADACHE.

In all cases of headache the first thing to do is to unblock the bowels and thus relieve the afflicted organs or the over-full blood vessels of the brain; and at the same time to restore tone to the system, re-establish the appetite, promote digestion and invigorate the entire body.

FOR THE BLOOD

will remove the cause of the trouble and restore the system to healthy action and buoyant vigor.

Mrs. J. Priest, Aspin, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with headache for several years and tried almost everything without result, until a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got two bottles, but before I had finished one I was completely cured. I can never say too much for B.B.B."
