Shadows Before.

What is transpiring, what is brewing over there in Europe? Not in the regular course of things that we know, the ebb and flow of battles, air-raids, sinkings of ships, political shifts and changes, ministerial speeches, and all the other usual ingredients of the farrago we call "war news"—what is there, underneath all these things and different from them, of more than ordinary moment, breaking out here and there in surface indications and filling the air with a sort of electric surcharge and men's minds with a sense of the imminence of tremendous events? For that sense is there; it is known that tremendous events are certain sooner or later—are they at hand? Let us recount a few of the latest of these surface indications, we speak of and see if they justify any expectations out of the ordinary.

The purely military situation presents its most striking feature in Haig's drive in Flanders. The combined forces there are driving ahead with a courage and determination that allow no interruption to the operations except by obstacles that are absolutely insurmountable. They are driving ahead in the face of most unfavourable conditions at a not very favourable time of year, which grows less propitious every day. They would not do this if they did not feel certain of one thing—that it is possible for them to achieve, before winter, a success which will be of transcendent importance, a success similar to that which crowned the battle of the Somme but many times more valuable. There is no need to discuss here all the possibilities that Haig has in view; the general aspects of the situation are easily comprehended. The point to notice is the almost feverish earnestness of the attack he is steadily pushing home.

The other military event that contributes to the importance of the whole present position is the course of it may be expressed in one sentence—General Cadorna seems unmistakably to be aiming past Mount San Gabriele rather than at it. This may appear a trivial way to epitomize what is really a great war in itself, but in reality it has a world of meaning. If Cadorna aimed at Trieste and Italy alone he would rapidly concentrate his great striking power on this formidable defence, the outwork of the defences to the peninsula. Instead, he appears to be leaving it alone, and to be striking down the Chiapovano valley. That valley leads to Laibach; at Laibach, experts say, the war can be won. If it is reached it will be by the splitting asunder of the Austrian armies, and that would leave the way open to Vienna. Here again the purpose and the time are to be considered together. Cadorna seems to think he can gain his object, or bring it within his grasp, before winter.

These are the two outstanding features of the military situation. A number of other things supply eloquent commentary. The past three or four weeks have witnessed a very great curtailing of the submarine successes to Germany's credit. There is strong likelihood that Arthur Pollen's surmise is correct, that the mutiny in the German navy, only now made known to the outside world in hints that give only suggestions of its real magnitude, was connected with the submarine war. Germany is short of underwater crews. She is impressing men who have no desire to be impressed. The incident is encouraging as showing the growing failure of the sub. war itself, still more as reflecting the spread of discontent in Germany. It is no small matter that actual mutiny should occur, in either service, and that it should spread its influences far enough to involve party discord and cleavage in the Reichstag. There is something also in the greater emphasis given everywhere to naval matters, generally. The Germans' hold on the Belgian coast is slipping from their grasp. It is being loosened on land; there has been more than idle talk of destroying it from sea. The New York Herald's startling message may be more than a newspaper story; it may be an exaggerated description of imminent events or a premature announcement of the actual truth. There is at any rate reason to believe that there will be "something doing" in the North Sea before long, more considerable than mine trawling and patrol skirmishes.

Finally, there is something peculiarly agitated in the behaviour of the Central Powers. They are talking peace, offering peace, reviling their enemies and quarrelling among themselves over peace. The one thing common to all their talk is the evident desire for peace and unmistakable alarm over the future. Austria cries out before she is struck; we will have peace, she says, but not at any price. It is a new thing that she should entertain the possibility of her enemies demanding terms which would represent peace "at any price" to her. Germany is willing to give up northern France and Belgium; that much is certain in spite of the pan-Germans. Here again it is not what these people say but the fact and the manner of their saying it that matters. The Allies have not suggested peace; they have not initiated peace discussions. They are busy with something more important. Lloyd George the other day was occupied with "urgent matters affecting the Entente." The commanders-in-chief in the field and in State council have been holding conference. Even Kerensky is now able to visit military headquarters. General Maude won a great victory last week. Bulgaria yesterday reported an attack by the Entente forces on the Dorian front after an all-day bombardment. All this and much more is the Allies' peace talk. Germany hears it in spite of the noise she is making herself. The impression conveyed by it all is that something—we do not know what, but something big—is going to happen and that it is going to happen soon.

The members of the Presentation Convent Association are invited to be present at the ceremony of opening the new building on Saturday, the 13th inst., at 9 a.m. The regular meeting of the Association will be held on Sunday, at 3.30 p.m., in the Convent. MARGARET FURLONG, Secretary.—Oct 12, 11.

An Anniversary.

Who can read the message cabled to-day to the Minister of Militia, containing Beach Thomas' tribute to the Regiment, without feeling his pulse quicken and his breath come faster? Even the pardonable pride we all have in our Regiment seems inadequate; it has ever to be increased to some new and glorious standard which these brave men set. A year ago to-day Gueudecourt was fought. Beaumont Hamel was re-venge, fresh laurels were won and, alas! many gallant men gave their lives to win them. The Regiment has kept its own anniversary. And yet it is necessary to keep calling for recruits to fill its ranks! The Regiment is our glory—shall it be our shame to show ourselves unworthy of it?

Fat Without Fear of Indigestion or Sour, Acid Stomach

Instant relief! "Pape's Diapepsin" ends your stomach trouble forever.

Wonder what upset your stomach— which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress. Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

American Vessel Total Wreck.

A large American schooner called the Amos Rockwell ran ashore at Cape English, St. Mary's Bay, yesterday during thick fog. She was a new vessel of about 450 tons register and was bound to a European port from a United States port with a cargo of machine oil when she met with mishap. The captain and crew landed safely and the vessel is a total wreck. The people of the shore are now engaged salvaging the cargo, as the schooner is well in the Bay on the rocks.

Everyday Etiquette.

"Would it be proper to have place cards for a dinner to only six guests?" asked Mrs. Newby.

"By all means. They not only avoid confusion but, if bright and unique, help to start conversation," answered her mother-in-law.

POLICE COURT.—Not a solitary prisoner appeared in court to-day. Judge Morris was occupied hearing civil cases.
