WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

"Do you know what I sometimes think I'd like to do?" a man said to me the other day. "I think I like to take what is left of life; don't know how much, but say it's 30 years, and have it out in five or even two years, each one fifty years' apart. I think of all I'd see of the world that are going to come to me."

Regulate Our Personalities?

Take the science of medicine for one thing. At the present time, we seem to be standing on the brink of a wonderful new understanding of the causes of physical and mental abnormality, criminality, bad adjustment and disease, through the action of the various ductless glands of the body. Already idiots have been made into normal people by stimulating the glands that have failed to work properly. It seems as if marvels of control and readjustment were going to be possible, as if man might be the master of his personality and his destiny through what science is just about to discover. Will it prove to be so? If we came back in 50 years should we find that glands had after all been found to be less important and less controllable than we now expect. Or should we find that idiots and criminals had been done away with and that the world was populated with a new race of men, all possessing as high a level of mental and physical energy as the best of us now have in our best moments.

The Steam Engine Like a Small

Take invention. The mind is staggered by the possibilities in that field. What is there left to wish for? Of course the development in the use of wireless telephone is going to be something wonderful beyond our imagining. And perhaps some new form of railroad will make the old seem as slow-going as steam made the stage coach. I believe there is now a monorail capable of infinite speed but doomed to obscurity since capital will not give it a try out because of the tremendous scrapping of present equipment and the upset of the whole financial condition. Its success would mean, perhaps some day, somehow, that will come into its own. Cheaper fuel will have to be found somehow; perhaps we may invent some direct method of utilizing and storing the sun's heat. Surely, too, man will someday find an economical harness for the vast energy of the tide's ebb and flow.

The World Unhappily

And then there is education. Compare the educational opportunities of 50 years ago with to-day. What shall we give our children 50 years from to-day, or a hundred? And then the greatest problem of all, that of peace and war. Is that to be somehow solved? It is now I fear that someday when one came back for one's five years of life one might find a world laid desolate. Like the old woman who went from hovel to cottage, to mansion, to palace and finally found herself back in the hovel again.

Prince As Ordinary Tourist.

RESTING FROM CEREMONIALS AT KYOTO.

KYOTO, Japan (Associated Press).—Free from the maze of brilliant ceremonies which have marked his visit to Tokio and other large cities of the north, the Prince of Wales will spend five or six days resting here before resuming his journey to the southern extremity of the empire. Word has gone out that aside from the brief welcoming ceremonies, the Prince is to be treated as an ordinary tourist. This picturesque city, for many centuries ancient capital of the nation, still retains much of the air of sanctity which was everywhere apparent when royal families of the dim ages made it the scene of court life. Even had it no associations with the past, Kyoto would still be attractive for the beauty of its location, situated as it is, at the base of an amphitheater of precipitous mountains covered with great forests of pine, maple and flowering shrubs. Several of the ancient imperial palaces will be open to the Prince for inspection, as well as many famous temples containing relics of pottery and cloisonné which ante-date the old buildings by many centuries. During his stay here the royal visitor will occupy the Omiya Goejo palace, situated in an extensive park. This building is noted throughout Japan for the beauty of its decorations and furnishings, contributed by the greatest masters of painting and carving in the empire.

FLAPPERS.

My aunt was once a flapper, and flapped rebellious wings; but now she is a scrapper for old time - honored things. I've heard a good many flappers - rumors that when she was eighteen she wore a pair of bloomers upon the village green. And there were protests, priests, and every righteous dame denounced her course as beastly, and said it was a shame. The moral weekly paper gave auntie half a page, and said her shameful caper, discredited the age. Revolt was auntie's passion, which was young and fair; she rode a horse man fashion, and bobbed her corset hair. The flappers now around us imagine they're unique, determined to confound us by some unseemly freak. But it's old stuff, my masters; the damascene of the past were wont to shock their pastors, and make them stand against. We see the pullets moult as hens have always done, and damsels were revolting way back in '81. My aunt was busy flapping in bygone sunny springs, and now we hear her yapping for old and changeless things. And maidens now rebelling against the whitelash whence, when older will be yelling that young girls have no sense.

Mother-in-Law's Attempt Failed.

PURSUED WIFE THINKS FIRST HUSBAND ALIVE.

PARIS, (Associated Press).—A woman's attempt to punish her daughter-in-law for marrying again after her husband's death in the war, has just been exposed here. An elderly woman in Touraine informed the Ministry of War that she had recognized her son-in-law of six photographs published by the newspapers of insane soldiers, former prisoners of war in Germany, returned after the armistice in a complete state of amnesia, unaware of their identity. The wife of the missing soldier having long ago given up her husband as dead, had been married a second time and in the midst of her new honeymoon she was instructed to come to Paris and identify her first husband. Greatly perturbed, she visited the hospital accompanied by her mother-in-law who greeted her son-in-law effusively. "That is not my husband," shouted the young woman and acquaintances of the missing soldier summoned also failed to recognize him, some of them even saying that there was not the slightest resemblance. The older woman broke down and told the officials: "I've known right along he wasn't my son but I wanted to teach his wife a lesson. She had no business getting married again."
