With Romance Well Concealed

Mr. Griffith's magnificent specimen of the "World," about as much as has been written which so much has been written will be the special attraction for the limited engagement at the Marie Monday.

The coming of peace makes particularly timely this tremendous historical document of Mr. Griffith's. The story is a great struggle in Europe, a struggle of interest to the masses, the long months he worked in the din and death of battle to back a romantic story woven by the splendid people of France, great love, their light laughter, hopes and fears, the heroic deeds of the women, the glory of the battle.

It is impossible that any power, able, could have visited France and brought back the scene of struggle and the devastation that followed there. Therefore all the more real and an added tribute to this dramatic genius that his "World" should be the sweetest love story of the world.

Stand unique among those made in France. Mr. Griffith has shown the beauty of the music of her moonlight, the perfume of her blossoms, the softness of her walls and her streets, the paths and ways, that the son of Caesar found beautiful in his age.

The fool asks afterwards what man asks before.

The principle business of some of these burgs seems to be that of getting along without work.

Just reading of a doctor who has his patients happy and smiling.
