MONDAY EV'G, OCT. 26, 1874.

Illicit Distillery in Amaranth.

The following case was tried at the Toronto Assizes on Thursday last: oronic Assizes on Thursday last:

THE QUEEN VS. HICKS AND EVANS.—

T. R. M. Fleming appeared for the rown: Mr. D. L. Scott, Orangeville, ppeared for the defendant Evans alone, he defendant Hicks was not represented.

Charles Edward Romain, Inspector of Unland Revenue, was at the village of Waldemar, in the township of Amaranth, on the 6th of May, 1872, on information he had received; went there with Mr. James Gow, the Collector of Inland Revenue; they found a man and woman engaged, when they reached the spot, rolling a barrel of spirits into the Grand River; he ordered them to desist, which they did, and he proceeded to take an inventory of the plant and apparatus on the premises. The man gave his name as W. J. Johnson. Mr. Romain described the situation as about four or five roofs from a twern kept by Hicks and Evans, and immediately on the banks of the river. The man who gave his name as "Johnson," subsequently admitted his proper name was Hicks, and that the woman spoken of was his wife. The informer said the parties were Robert Hicks and Loxan, for Evans, and were the root of the first information he had received was correct, as subsequent-events all proved the correctness of what he helived the first information he had received was correct, as subsequent-events all proved the correctness of what he had been told. Parties wishing go into distilling make application to the Collector of Inland Revenue. This application must be approved by the District Inspector, (the office filled by the witness.) There had been no such application in this case. The barrel of spirits he supposed was made in triplicate. They had the materials for mashing, distilling, and rectifying, the latter as far as they could do so. They must have worked more than one day before they do there. He thought the capacity of the place would work of property, whiskey and plant was sold, and about $300 worth destroyed.

Mr. Scott said he appeared for Evans alone. Hicks was not represented. In distilling, they would do. It appeared both ship, they would do. It appeared of the train on its approached to Waldemar, in collusion with the conductor of the parties rolling the barrel as described, and others were no returns made from this distillery; it would be the
