

Remember the Name!

It's easy to get what you don't want in this world—coughs, colds, sore throat, asthma, for instance. It's easier still to get the remedy you don't want unless you remember to say "Shiloh's Cure"—then you're safe, then you have the genuine. For 40 years Shiloh's Cure has been the most successful throat, bronchial and lung remedy in the market. Scores of imitations have arisen, are arising, will arise—trading on our reputation. Shiloh's Cure outvalues its imitations—as the genuine always does—because it is a cure, not a substitute. The delay, the risk, the harm of a substitute may be obviated now and always, if you'll just remember the name, and see that you get—

AN EFFECTIVE FETICH.

The Surprise Stanley Prepared for an African Chief.

Ngalyma was an African and an enterprising trader in ivory and slaves, holding the position of chief of the Stanley Post district. He had demanded, wrote Sir Henry M. Stanley in his "Autobiography," and also bestowed a goodly sum for granting Stanley the privilege of establishing a station where up river navigation begins. Time passed, and Ngalyma chose to forget this transaction and made an impudent demand for more money. Duly warned, however, Stanley had prepared a surprise for him.

I had hung a great Chinese gong conspicuously near the principal tent. All my men were hidden, some in the steambot on top of the wagon, and in its shadow was a cool place, where the warriors would gladly rest after a ten mile march. Other of my men lay still as death under tarpaulins, under bundles of grass and in the bush round the camp. By the time the drum taps and horns announced Ngalyma's arrival the camp seemed practically abandoned.

Ngalyma was strangely cold at my hearty greeting and said: "Has not my brother forgotten his road? What does he mean by coming to this country?" "May, it is Ngalyma who has forgotten the bond that exists between us. It is Ngalyma who has forgotten the mountains of goods which I paid him. What words are these of my brother?"

Speech and counterspeech followed. Ngalyma had exhausted his arguments, but it was not easy to break faith and be uncivil without plausible excuse. His eyes were reaching round to discover an excuse to fight when they rested on the round burnished face of the Chinese gong.

"What is that?" he said. "Ah, that—that is a fetich." "A fetich! A fetich for what?" "It is a war fetich, Ngalyma. The slightest sound of that would fill this empty camp with hundreds of angry warriors. They would drop from above, they would spring up from the ground, from the forest about, from everywhere."

"Sho! Tell that story to the old women and not to a chief like Ngalyma. My boy tells me it is a kind of bell. Strike it and let me hear it." "Strike it, I say." I struck it hard and fast, and the clangorous roll rang out like thunder in the stillness.

Only for a few seconds, however, for a tempest of human voices was heard busting into frightful discords, and from above, right upon the heads of the astonished warriors, leaped yelling men, and from tents, the bushes, the forest roundabout, they came by sizes, dozens and scores, yelling like madmen and seemingly animated with uncontrollable rage.

The painted warriors became panic-stricken. They forgot their chief and all thoughts of loyalty and fled on the instant, fear lifting their heels high in the air.

But Ngalyma and his son did not fly. They caught the tails of my coat, and we began to dance from side to side, a loving triplet, myself being foremost to ward off the blows savagely aimed at my "brothers" and cheerfully crying out:

"Hold fast to me, my brothers! I will defend you to the last drop of my blood! Come one, come all!" Presently the order was given. "Fall in!" and quickly the men stood in two long lines in beautiful order. Ngalyma relaxed his hold of my coat, tails and crept from behind, breathing more freely.

"Eh, mamma!" he exclaimed. "Where did all these people come from?" "Ah, Ngalyma," I said, "did I not tell you it was a powerful fetich? Let me strike it again and show you what else it can do."

"No, no!" he shrieked. "I have seen enough."

The Flower of the Navy. Known among his intimates as "Tug" Wilson, Admiral Sir A. K. Wilson, G.C.B., G.C.V.O., K.C.B., V.C., who has succeeded Admiral Fisher (Lord Fisher of Kelvinstone) as First Sea Lord, has been very aptly described as "our greatest naval strategist."

Entering the navy at thirteen years of age as a cadet, he was awarded the V.C. for conspicuous bravery at the battle of El Teb, in the Soudanese war of 1884. Five or six of the enemy rushed forward. Captain Wilson advanced to meet them alone, and, breaking in his effort to cut one of them down, would not retire a step, but held his ground, knocking them down with his fists.

The new First Sea Lord is the inventor of the double-barrelled torpedo-tube, perhaps the most reticent admiral in the fleet, and a man of unpunctuated appearance and iron will. Yet he has one weakness—a passionate love of flowers. Wherever he goes, his steward decorates his room every day with beautiful blooms.

Old James Watt established the term "horsepower" in order that he might have some basis of comparison of the power developed by his engines. He measured the work done by a heavy London draft horse of the Clydesdale or similar variety during short intervals by observing the weight it could lift against gravity, the horse walking on the ground and pulling horizontally on a rope led through pulleys, so that the weight rose vertically. The unit horsepower, so established, was 550 foot pounds of work per second, or 33,000 foot pounds a minute—that is, 33,000 pounds raised one foot in a minute, 330 pounds raised 100 feet or a pound raised 33,000 feet a minute. But whereas few horses could do that amount of work for more than a few seconds together, a one horsepower engine will go on producing that amount of work indefinitely so long as it is supplied with steam.

Dalhousie Boys Hear Good Sermon

The baccalaureate sermon in connection with the closing exercise of Dalhousie university was delivered by Rev. G. M. Young at the Brunswick street Methodist church last evening. The church was completely filled, students forming a large percentage of the attendance.

On the pulpit platform assisting Rev. Mr. Young was Rev. Dr. Forrest, president of Dalhousie, who offered prayer and read the scripture. Rev. Mr. Young, who is a pleasing and able speaker, took as his text—"Not yours—but you." Corinthians xii., 85. His discourse was a plea for character rather than a mere manifestation of it.

Life itself is greater than a life work, for without life there can be no life work, nothing but nothingness. The age calls for men who "do things," who accomplish, who achieve. Who and what the man is, the hustling busy world takes comparatively little notice.

It is the overt act the man has done the world looks at. Christianity on the other, is more concerned in the man as he is, in his own personality, his ideals, his doctrines, his innermost thoughts and beliefs; that which, unknown to the world and his fellowmen, lies deep within his heart, and pertains to his soul.

Not that a Christian should not achieve, but primarily and essentially he should cultivate and mould his character on Christian faith and ideals.

The issues of the day, industrial and labor disputes, legislative difficulties, are settled more by the higher virtues of honesty and integrity than by activity. Where capital and labor act in fairness and sincerity towards each other, few differences occur. The same with our legislators.

CRY FOR MEN WHO ARE INNATELY SINCERE

Hence the growing cry for men who are innately sincere and honest at the head of the world's affairs.

The sermon was pointed and instructive, full of valuable advice to the young men who, having graduated from the halls of learning, go out into the larger sphere of labor in the world's work.

The music by the choir, under the leadership of Miss Kate Mackintosh, was of a high order.

The Impossible Has Become Possible—English Chemists Are the Discoverers.

TO GROW HAIR ON BALD SPOTS WAS ONCE CONSIDERED IMPOSSIBLE. They have recently discovered the long-looked-for remedy.

Ladies need never wear rats. The ladies of Paris have abandoned all false hair fillers, and are using the new hair grower—SALVIA. Hair can be grown in a few weeks. Mrs. Jackson of New York, writes stating that since using SALVIA her hair had grown six inches in two months. Marvellous are the results obtained from this new preparation. Not only does it produce a beautiful, fluffy head of hair, but at once destroys the dandruff germ. Mr. Warren guarantees SALVIA to grow hair, kill dandruff and to make the hair soft and fluffy. SALVIA is not a dye; does not contain anything injurious. All of its ingredients are simple and harmless. A daintily perfumed hair dressing, used and endorsed by men and women of society. A large, generous bottle only costs 50c., and remember, a money back proposition.

A HOME RULER.

An Irish school inspector was examining a class in geography. He had pronounced a question regarding longitude and received a correct answer from the lad undergoing the ordeal.

"And now," he said, "what is latitude?"

After a brief silence a bright youngster, with a merry twinkle in his eye, said:

"Please, sir, we have no latitude in Ireland. Father says the British Government won't allow us any."
