

may become commercially viable within the next 10 years; for example, combustion modifications offer the promise of relatively inexpensive NO_x control for coal-fired power plants.