and our proprietaries, which are amongst his Majefty's other "DOMINIONS" to be "defended, protected and fecured" by the act, will not pay a fingle farthing for the duties thereby imposed, except Lord Fairfax wants fome of his windows glazed; Lord Baltimore and our proprietaries are quite fecure, as they live in England.

I mention these particular cases, as striking instances how far the late act is a deviation from that principle of justice, which has so constantly distinguissed our own laws on this continent, and ought to be regarded in all laws.

The third confideration with our continental affemblies in laying taxes, has been the method of collecting them. This has been done by a few officers, under the infpection of the respective affemblies, with moderate allowances. No more was raifed from the fubjest, than was used for the intended purposes. But by the late act, a minister may appoint as many efficers as he pleases for collecting the taxes; may affign them what falaries he thinks " adequate;" and they are subject to no inspettion but his own.

In short, if the late act of parliament takes effect, these colonies must dwindle into " COMMON CORPORATIONS," as their enemies, in the debates concerning the repeal of the stamp act, strenuously infisted they were; and it feems not improbable that fome future historian may thus record our fall.

"The eighth year of this reign was diftinguished ed by a very memorable event, the American colonies then more for those proprietors than they themselves would venture. to demand. It totally exempts them from taxation—tho' their vaft eftates are to be "fecured" by the taxes of other people.
