

X FREE TRADE IN BEING

6. INSULAR FREE TRADE—continued.

PAGE

| | |
|---|-----|
| Application of the Protectionist Theory to the United Kingdom | 150 |
| Consequences deduced from Protectionist Theory if Great Britain persists in Free Trade | 154 |

SECTION II

THE TWO THEORIES IN THEIR RELATION TO GREAT BRITAIN, TESTED BY THE EXPERIENCE OF SEVENTY YEARS

| | |
|---|-----|
| (I.) The Protectionist case from experience | 156 |
| (II.) The Free Trade case from experience | 163 |
| The nature of the proof required | |
| I. Static | 166 |
| (a) We are keeping the first call on the trade of the world | 168 |
| (b) We are keeping the best of the trade of the world | 173 |
| (c) We are keeping as much as we can do of the trade of the world in good times | 174 |
| The phenomenon of unemployment of the fit and willing in Great Britain | 178 |
| Summary of the case (Static) | 181 |
| II. Dynamic—Protectionist arguments tested | 183 |
| (a) Are our markets contracting, and are we at a disadvantage, constantly increasing, in the international exchange of commodities? | 184 |
| (b) Are our exports, if not shrinking in quantity, degenerating in kind? | 187 |
| (c) Are British capital and labour flying to protected countries? | 195 |