MUSIC AND MACHINERY

Near Aylmer in the old days there was a saw mill managed by a civil war veteran. The man in charge of the saw was continually running into trouble, and during one week he had been forced to take the saw to town to get it set. The owner of the mill asked the veteran the reason for these frequent breakdowns and got a complete answer: "The durn fodl has no ear for music. He cannot tell when things are going wrong." It has been said often that while a stoker works with his ear. The man who sits before a complicated machine should be able to tell instantaneously if an abnormal sound begins to rise from it. If his ear has not been trained, the probability is that the machine will develop serious internal disorders. A Toronto electrician in charge of a battery of big dynamos attributes his success to the fact that when he was young his parents gave him a long course of violin lessons, thus developing in him a keen sense of the values and inter-relations of sound. Here is a suggestion for parents whose boys have shown mechanical ability and who have a beaf for some form of technical training. Let the lad's ear be trained by a violin course. He will be a better mechanician and a better workman. Besides he will have a hobby that will bring him unending delight as long as he lives.

GOOD-BYE RECITAL OF ISOLDE MENGES

GIVEN TONIGHT

Isolde Menges gives her final recital of the festival series this evening in the Masonic Temple, and ever so many people are sorry that the musical feast is so near a close. Possessing all the qualities which go to make up a great artist, Isolde Menges possesses as well the charm of a great artiesness and unaffected sincerity and simplicity. Her playing arouses enthusiasm and whole-hearted admiration. Her personality and her delightful little descriptions of her numbers endear her to her audience and make them her firm friends. At no time has she appeared to better advantage than when she played for and talked to almost a thousand London public school children. They won't forget in the years to come that they were the guests for a wonderful afternoon of the great violinist, and that she made her violin talk to them, sing to them and conjure up wonderful moving pictures for them. They probably will remember always what she said to them about the importance of being good and appreciating good and beautiful things, and also about beginning very young to understand beautiful things, and also about beginning very young to understand beautiful things, and also about beginning very young to understand beautiful things, and also about beginning very young to understand beautiful things, and also about beginning very young to understand beautiful things like music, and to learn thoroughly. The grown-up audiences have found these Menges recitals refreshing and inspiring.

The famous Kreutzer Sonata (Beethoven) has been reserved as the opening number for this evening, giving as it does great scope for the musicianship of Miss Elleen Beattie, planist, as well as the violinist. Other numbers include the Mendelssohn Concerto for violin, and plant and the well were all the were all the musical and the mendels of ship of Miss Elleen Beattie, pianist, as well as the violinist. Other numbers include the Mendelssohn Concerto for violin and piano, an a, b, dand d number, "Ave Maria" (Schubert-Wilhelmi); "Moment Musical" (Schubert-Kreisler): Poem Lyrique (Herbert Menges), and two Hungarian Dances in B minor and E minor (Brahmas-Joachim), as well as a couple of Spanish dances by Sarsate, "Malaguena and Habenera."

THAT TREMOLO VOICE

What Mozart Thought About It—Sald:

"Contrary to Nature."

The funny papers have lost many an opportunity to tickle the public's fancy by concentrating on the Farmer Corntossel and mother-in-law puns to the neglect of the way in which young ladies alm at imitating the tremolo stop on the organ when they "come out" in the singing world. Sayde Joins the choir of the church her parents attend, and a couple of weeks later, when asked to sing for some friends she renders one of the standard songs, rendeavoring to add to its effect by making use of what one gentleman calls the cinematographic vocal wobble.

By that he means the forced tremolo olds for freedom there is in some of our current fashions: and what that is, is past explanation. The affected tremolo volce is not a recent habit as is airplaning, submarining, and wirelessing. It was that one time Mozart's day. We read that at one time Mozart worte: "Nothing can be more truly odious; besides, it is a style of singing quite contrary to nature. The human voice is naturally tremulous, but only so far as to be beautiful, and it is imitated not only on wind instruments, but on stringed in struments and even on the pianoforte. But the moment the proper boundary is passed it is no longer beautiful, because it becomes unlike an organ when the bellows are panting." And, Mozart's view is held by some people to day:

This great man says the affectation of the tremolo is not natural, and surely is passed it is unnatural does not amount to much.

It is not what the manufacturers claim for it, but the testimony of the multiplied thousands who have been benefited by it that has made Tanlac the most famous medicine in the world today. Mrs. Amy O'Brien, a life-long resident of Toronto, whose husband is with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, "Somewhere in France," in an interesting interview at her home, 134 Lansdowne avenue, recently said:
"One day I saw in the paper where a lady who described my symptoms exactly had gotten relief by taking Tanlac, and that's what caused me to take it and find relief from my troubles. So no one knows the good they may do by telling what helped them out of their suffering. I have been afflicted with rheumatism for five years, and my goneral health had become all broken. And although I spent lots of money for treat-ment and medicines of various kinds, my condition grew worse until I began taking Tanlac. I would have attacks of acute rheumatism when it seemed like the pain would drive me distracted. Just sharp, shooting pains all through my arms that left my muscles so sore I
