He (Blair) was proud the government was vindicated. The people had struck a blow in defence of good government and equal rights to all. He was proud for his old friend (Mr. O. J LeBlanc), now standing loyally by his side, on account of the splendid vote his parish had rolled np. He thanked them all personally and would leave the grand old county of Kent with a high appreciation of her capabilities in many ways and with a feeling that he held a warm place in their hearts and that a bond of personal and political friendship had been cemented between him and thom in this great struggle which would not soon be sundered. It would not be needful to counsel his friends to believed they would do. Closing he said Well gentlemen the battle is now over, you have vindicated your freedom from Dominion party domination, and our claim of Mr. Labillois as a fitting repres entative and leader in local politics of the French Acadian people.

At the conclusion of Mr. Blair's address cheer after cheer were given and he Flour! Flour! Flour! was showered with congratulations on the
