ST. JOHN STAR.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MAY 15, 1902.

THE LATE MR. RANDOLPH.

While the death of the Hon. A. F. Randolph will be most keenly regretted in the city to whose upbuilding and welfare his life was a constant contribution, yet there are many in other portions of the province who will mourn the passing of a spirit of peculiar sweetness and strength. A gentleman in the best sense of the term, courteous, of quick sympathy and generous impulse, he impressed all whom he met with a feeling that candor and sincerity and simple kindness were in him a living force, appealing to the like qualities in those about him. It is not easy to estimate the influence of such a personality. We may say that as merchant or banker, or as member of this or that board or society or church, he accomplished certain definite aims, and thus enhanced the general welfare—but that is not all. The unconscious influence which flows from the daily life of such a man as the late Mr. Randolph bears fruit, the ultimate value of which can never be estimated in the coin of the market place.

THE REAL LESSON.

A clergyman is reported to have expressed the opinion that the calamity which has overtaken the town of St. Pierre is a divine retribution, and a former United States consul at that town is reported to have said that knowing the gross immorality of the people his first thought on hearing of the disaster was that it was a repetition of the story of Sodom and Gomorrah.

The most striking feature of such deliverances as these is their picturesque disregard of common sense. There are more grossly immoral persons in either London, Paris, New York or Chicago than the total number of people in the town of St. Pierre. If we were unscientific enough to ignore the fact that the volcanic disturbances have manifested themselves in several other places besides Martinique, and St. Vincent, by what process of reasoning can we arrive at the conclusion that the Supreme Being would overlook the vice in the great centres of the world's enlightenment and shrivel up the bodies of a few thousands of half civilized people on a lonely island—along with many whom we are bound to assume were as intelligent and so far as we know as good as ourselves? The suggestion that such disasters are produced for spectacular effect is a revolting one, and reveals a phase of mind utterly at variance with modern conceptions of Divine purpose. The wise man is not he who professes to know and interpret the mind of God in such matters, but he who stands uncovered in the presence of a mystery he cannot solve, and from which he learns anew the age-long lesson that man has here no abiding city.

THE "SILLY" TELEGRAPH.

The Telegraph takes exception to the Star's statement that Mr. George Robertson returns from Ottawa a disappointed man. Does the Telegraph contend that Mr. Robertson is subject to spasms of delight at the refusal of the government to aid the dry dock? For what purpose did he go to Ottawa? For what purpose did the delegation visit the capital? The Telegraph devotes over half a column of its editorial space to fulsome eulogy of Mr. Robertson. This is the method adopted by Mr. Blair's organ to soothe Mr. Robertson after the government of which Mr. Blair is a member had turned him down. The thing is so utterly transparent that the Telegraph pays a very poor tribute to Mr. Robertson's discernment if it thinks he cannot see through the game. Mr. Robertson is not looking for and does not need cheap flattery. It is not for that he has been laboring, and it comes with a particularly bad grace from the organ of Mr. Blair.

If a liberal-conservative government were in power at Ottawa now, and the claims of St. John were turned down as they have been by Mr. Tarte and Mr. Blair, with what fervor the Telegraph and Globe would call upon the citizens to hold mass meetings and demand the resignation of the St. John members, as a protest against the contemptuous manner in which the representations of our delegates have been treated. But the Telegraph is Mr. Blair's organ and the Globe remembers that it scoffed at the idea that St. John would ever get any through business away from American ports. Verily, times have changed.

THE VOLCANOES.

SHOWERS OF PUMICE STONE.

ST. THOMAS, D. W. I., May 14.—It is reported from the French island of Guadeloupe that pumice stone in great quantities is floating on the sea there and at the British island of Dominica, and that much stone has been cast up on the beaches of those islands.

The loss at St. Pierre of the Grappler, the cable repair ship of the West Indies and Panama Telegraph Co. was a severe blow to St. Thomas, as nearly all the Grappler's crew were related here. Subscriptions have been opened to relieve their destitute families, and an appeal has been made to help the relatives of the men on the Grappler who perished while bravely performing their duty.

MT. PELEE STILL THREATENING.

FORT DE FRANCE, Island of Martinique, May 13.—I have just returned from the ruins of St. Pierre, unable longer to withstand the terrible hardships and encounter the horrible sights that were with me every minute of the 24 hours of my stay there.

When I reached St. Pierre I was surprised that more of the dead were not in sight. Not more than a thousand bodies were strewn along the streets, the others being at least partly buried under the mantle of ashes and cinders spread by Mt. Pelee.

Every moment of my stay in St. Pierre I feared that the volcano would again belch forth its billows of death-dealing fire. It continues active, vomiting lava in streams which flow down its sides, changing the surface of the northern end of the island every hour.

It is the stench and the danger of pestilence that make St. Pierre a place of even greater horror than was caused by the first result of the explosion of Mt. Pelee. All the bodies first found on the surface have been buried by soldiers, but few of those in the ruins have been dug out. It will require months, unless a greater force of men is employed, before the dead are properly disposed of.

The sand and ashes that cover the city are still hot. Waves of heat come down from the crater of the volcano, making work among the ruins difficult, when it is not absolutely impossible.

Reports that all the inhabitants of the village of Le Precheur had been brought to this city are not true. A great wave of lava swept across one portion of the village, destroying the lives of about 800 inhabitants. The others fled to the seashore, and were rescued by the French cruiser Suchet. Other villages at the foot of Mt. Pelee were destroyed by the lava, which flowed along the courses formerly followed by the river.

Indignation against Gov. Mouttet grows as the panic of the survivors subsides. It is remembered that while Mt. Pelee was threatening and giving warning of the disaster it was about to work, the governor refused to permit any general exodus from St. Pierre.

Some food has been brought here from the neighboring island, but famine still continues to threaten the refugees. All are on half rations, and when it is realized that pestilence is an immediate menace it can be understood why there should be plenty of food to give those who may be attacked strength enough to fight the disease.

Vandalism has already begun at St. Pierre, and, although soldiers are trying to guard the dead, looting is going on in a shameful manner. Announcement will soon be made providing severe penalties for all who are caught stealing in the island.

In the harbor of St. Pierre a steamship is in constant readiness to take away the workers if Mt. Pelee becomes more threatening. A watch is constantly maintained, ready to give warning, and if the lava turns in the direction of St. Pierre the place will be immediately deserted.

Aside from those working in the ruins there is not a human being in the northern portion of the island. All who have not been killed have fled to Fort de France.

A WARNING A YEAR AGO.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13.—Capt. Sutherland, chief of the hydrographic office, is planning a series of hydrographic surveys in the Antilles, as he believes there have been great upheavals of the sea bottom in many sections which have created great menaces to navigation through the fact that they are not charted.

Captain Sutherland points out that a year ago there was a premonitory sign of the tremendous disturbance which has just taken place in the earth's crust. The "Notice to Mariners" of June 8, 1901, contains the following notice:

Capt. J. Thomas of the schooner Kate reports that May 5, about 25 miles eastward from the south point of Martinique, the sea rose with great fury, breaking in great waves for about four hours; then the sea became quite smooth again. The schooner labored very heavily, sustaining slight damage. The watch is continuing the phenomenon, the light airs from the southeast not giving her steady weather. The weather was fair.

ST. PIERRE SMOLDERING RUINS.

BARBADOS, May 13.—When I left St. Pierre yesterday the city was a heap of smoldering ruins. Thousands of corpses were strewn on every side, having been destroyed by the great volcanic bomb.

The cathedral clock was sounding at 7.10 o'clock in a solitary tone. This shows the time when the awful rain of fire began. It rained fire for 20 minutes, when every part of the city was ablaze and the shipping in the harbor sunk.

The government, thinking all danger over the eruption of lava to a height of 120 feet on May 6, formed a column of soldiers around the city to prevent residents from leaving further ally excitement. The governor took up his residence with several scientists in St. Pierre.

A single person who was in St. Pierre when Mt. Pelee exploded escaped. It will take thousands to dig out and bury the dead. The small of burning flesh is perceptible three miles from shore.

The Rotunda was still burning yesterday, the ruins of the city will burn for weeks longer.

Food for the survivors has been sent from St. Thomas and Barbados for 12,000 refugees who are in outlying villages.

BRITISH PRACTICAL RELIEF.

LONDON, May 15.—A. J. Balfour, government leader in the House of Commons, will announce in parliament the intention of the government respecting the relief of the survivors of the Martinique and St. Vincent disasters.

Mrs. William Chamberlain of Birmingham, has sent Joseph Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, 500 pounds ($7,500) towards the relief of the West Indian sufferers.

Messages of sympathy concerning the West Indian catastrophe are being voted by the public bodies throughout the United Kingdom.

VOLCANO STILL RUMBLING.

LONDON, May 15.—The Port de France correspondent of the Times, in a despatch describing the present condition of Mt. Pelee, says that the volcano is still rumbling and that three luminous points on the lower slopes of the mountain, which are casting incandescent rays, seem to presage a further calamity.

HON. A. F. RANDOLPH.

A Fredericton Paper's Tribute to His Memory.

(Fredericton Gleaner.)

There is no uncertainty and no conventionality in the expressions of regret and sorrow one hears on every hand regarding the Hon. A. F. Randolph. Few men are more genuinely mourned and more deeply missed, and everywhere in this community there are people who mourn the loss of a kind personal friend.

It has not been given to many men to live as broad and full and active a life as Mr. Randolph lived. There are few departments of life which are open to men in which he had not some active share. He was bank president, lumber operator, manufacturer, merchant. He was active in church circles, in educational work, and essentially philanthropic; and in the quieter and more personal life that a man leads he lived his share. His life was a life of varied activities. It is difficult to single any one of these activities as the most important, because each man came in contact with him in a different aspect, and such was the vigor and the vitality of his life in each and all of its aspects that each man naturally regards the aspect he saw as being the real occupation of the man. To many he was the generous benefactor, ever alive to the cry of distress and ever active to remove its cause. To others he was essentially the public minded citizen who could be relied upon to support every movement and every institution. His was not merely the careless giving of a well to do man. He gave himself, and he had a long record of zealous and active service on many a committee and board where work was more common than thanks. These institutions will miss not only his financial support, but the even more valuable guarantee of his name and the value of his judgment in the administration of its affairs. To others again he was a devoted church member, ready to support and direct the affairs of his church and to give pastor and people alike the benefit of his experience and judgment and piety.

With others his activity as a bank president is what seemed the real life of the man. He may be regarded as the pioneer of good banking in this city, and a long and honorable record he has had in connection with the People's Bank of New Brunswick, which has been so closely connected with and so largely responsible for the development of the city of his adoption. Others again know him primarily as our leading merchant, and perhaps this was the aspect in which he was most widely known; while again others knew him best as the leading member of the lumbering firm of Randolph and Baker; and hundreds met him as chairman of the Fredericton Board of School Trustees, a position which he held for over a quarter of a century.

In one way or another he was known to and respected by nearly everyone in the province, and indeed far beyond it. While essentially a public man and a public spirited man, he took little direct part in active politics, whether provincial or federal affairs, although at one time a member of the legislative council, and was perhaps none the worse and none the less happy for his abstention. But in every public movement that made for the public good he was active and diligent.

Each man may choose that aspect of a many-sided career which interests him most; but yet no single aspect expresses the whole man. It is true that he threw his whole self into all that he undertook, but he was always bigger and broader and better than the immediate work on which he was engaged; and one constantly recognized that the real life of the man was lived behind these activities, which were but the passing expressions of his nature.

VICTOR HUGO.

A good audience assembled last night at St. John's church school house, when the literature course inaugurated at the beginning of the present year was continued by a lecture on Victor Hugo delivered by Mrs. Fluke.

The Rev. John deSoyres, who presided, referred to the serious loss to the province involved in the departure of Professor Stockley, but declared that in three gifted ladies in this city St. John had still competent guides. One of them, their instructress tonight, had especially devoted herself to French literature.

Mrs. Fluke commenced by giving a narrative of Victor Hugo's life, so large a part of which was spent in exile on British soil. His historical position, in relation to the Romantic school, was fully explained, and his literary methods illustrated by a full analysis of the famous tale "Les Misérables," from which many striking extracts were quoted.

At the close of the lecture a vote of thanks was unanimously passed.

SALMON BAY COAL MINE.

(Fredericton Gleaner.)

The woodboat Harvest Home is in port with a cargo of coal from Salmon Bay, Queen's County. This is the first coal from that mine to come to this market. The Salmon Bay mine is owned by H. B. Sprague, of this city, and Geo. B. Crawford, of Salmon Bay. They have spent considerable money in opening up their mine and have struck a vein of superior quality coal at a depth of about forty feet below the surface, the coal vein being some three feet in thickness. Salmon Bay is eighteen miles from Grand Lake and the mine is a mile and a half from the line of railway now under construction.
