Is Unable to Find His Sweetheart.

The young man from Augusta, Me, who was mentioned in yesterday's Star as leaving a baby at John King's house on Erin street, was in the police court this morning, and to Acting Magistrate Henderson told a pathetic story. He said that for the past three years he had kept company with the mother of the child who resided with her parents on City Road. He loved the girl and several times asked her to marry him and she promised to do so, saying that she wanted no other man for a husband. Before the child was born he came from Augusta, Me, to marry the girl, but her parents said she was too weak to marry then. Two days after the child was born he was advised by a local physician to take the child to John King's house to board, and he did so. At that time the child was healthy, and a month later Mrs. King said the child was all right, so the infant's arm must have been broken while it was in the care of the Kings.

After securing board at eight dollars a month for the child the young man said he returned to Augusta to build up a little home for the girl and their child. The girl wrote to him asking that she was ready to be married. He left his work and when he called at her house a few days ago he was informed by her parents that she was many miles away and they did not know where she was. He says he is anxious to do what is right and will marry her as soon as shoc and be located. He thinks he can give her a good home and only this morning her parents refused to tell him where their daughter was. The young man feels his position keenly and was advised by the court to call on Secretary Wetmore of the Alms House.

PERSONAL The grand jury adjourned at 12.45 for lunch and resumed its session at 2.30
