

NOTORIOUS RUSSIAN COUNTESS RELEASED

PROFESSOR SAYS SHE IS NOT REALLY A CRIMINAL.

Made a Murderer of One Man and Ruined Several.
Others.

The woman who caused the death of Count Kamarowsky at Venice in 1907, who made a murderer of Dr. Nicholas Naumoff, son of the Governor of Orel, and brought M. Prilukoff, a respected Moscow lawyer, to a convict's cell, has been pardoned and released. She is soon, it is said, to go to the front with the Russian army as a war nurse.

The case of this extraordinary criminal, in whose veins, it is said, flows the blood of the Borgias whose exploits she has imitated, has been subjected to close study by a number of alienists and gynecologists, among them being Redlich, Fenomenof, Rhein, and Bossi. And their conclusions indicate that this modern Circe, who spread ruin wherever she went, was not deliberately vicious, but merely the victim of her own diseased organism.

It was in 1907 that the world first heard of the beautiful Countess Marie Tarnowska. When Count Paul Kamarowsky, a Russian nobleman, was fatally shot at Venice, her name was the last word he uttered, and it was found that he was betrothed to her, and had insured his life to her benefit for the sum of $100,000. Soon her complicity in his death was suspected, and after a long and sensational trial, she was sentenced to eight years' imprisonment in the penitentiary at Trani. Her accomplice, Prilukoff, was condemned to ten years' penal servitude, and Nicholas Naumoff, who fired the fatal shot, was liberated, because the two years' incarceration which had preceded his trial was considered sufficient punishment for this dupe of a dangerous adventuress.

Not a Criminal.

But the woman who caused this and other crimes has not been utterly forgotten during her stay in an Italian prison. Professor Luigi M. Bossi, a distinguished alienist and gynecologist associated with the University of Genoa, was called as an expert for the defence at the trial in Genoa. He believed that the Countess Tarnowska was not a criminal, but an invalid, and he was indignant at the punishment inflicted upon her. With the purpose of getting before the world the true story of this "tragic woman," he persuaded Anne Vivanti Chartres, the novelist to visit her in prison and take down from her own lips the amazing narrative of her life. This Mrs. Chartres has done, and the result is the book "Marie Tarnowska," which is soon to be published.

So it is that one of the most mysterious crimes of modern times is at last revealed in all its startling details. And so, also, the life story of a beautiful woman who wrought more harm than any other of her generation is now told, and told in a way which may give credence to the theory that this woman's crimes and those of many another woman have their source in physical weakness rather than moral depravity.

The history of the crime which brought to her the imprisonment from which she has just been released, may be briefly told as follows: The Countess was betrothed to Count Kamarowsky, a wealthy Russian nobleman, who was devoted to her. She, however, was in love with one Donat Prilukoff, who had been a prosperous Moscow lawyer until love for her had ruined him. With Prilukoff she plotted Kamarowsky's death, and with Prilukoff she intended to share the fortune of Kamarowsky, which he had willed to her, and his life insurance, which was made out in her favor.

Bossi's Defence.

But the Countess and her lover were unwilling to be principals in the murder. So she persuaded Nicholas Naumoff, a young man who was desperately in love with her, to kill Kamarowsky as a means to gain her affection. He obeyed her, and with the results of his obedience the world is familiar.

It seems, from this bare recital, that no adequate defence of the Countess Tarnowska is possible. But Professor Bossi thinks otherwise. Here are his views, as he utters them in the address to Mrs. Chartres, which he prefaces her book:

"Not only as the medical expert for the defence at the trial of the Countess Tarnowska, but as one who has made it his life work to investigate the relation in women between criminal impulse and morbid physical condition, I cannot but feel the keenest interest in this book; in which you set forth the problem of wide human interest presented by the case of the prisoner in Trani.

"I believe that eventually it will promote the realization that even in the darkest regions of moral degradation it is possible for science to raise the torch of hope. Thus, though appealing for the moment to the interest of the general reader, it will ultimately constitute a significant document in the history of the evolution of pathological science."

ALL MOTHERS NEED CONSTANT STRENGTH

Their Strength is Taxed and They are Victims of Weakness and Suffering.

When there is a growing family to care for and the mother falls ill it is a serious matter. Many mothers who are on the go from morning to night, whose work, apparently, is never done, try to disguise their suffering and keep up an appearance of cheerfulness before their family. Only themselves know how they are distressed by backaches and headaches, dragging down pains and nervous weakness; how their nights are often sleepless, and they arise to a new day's work tired, depressed and quite unrefreshed. Such women should know that their sufferings are usually due to lack of good nourishing blood. They should know that the one thing they need above all others to give them health and strength is rich red blood, and that among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their blood-making, health-restoring qualities. Every suffering woman, every woman with a home and family to care for should give these pills a fair trial, for they will keep her in health and strength and make her work easy. Mrs. G. Strasser, Acton West, Ont., says: "I am the mother of three children, and after each birth I became terribly run down. I had weak, thin blood, always felt tired, and unable to do my household work. After the birth of my third child I seemed to be worse, and was very badly run down. I was advised to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I found the greatest benefit from the Pills and soon gained my old-time strength. Indeed, after taking them I felt as well as in my girlhood, and could take pleasure in my work. I also used Baby's Own Tablets for my little ones and have found them a splendid medicine for childhood ailments."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

INCREASE IN USE OF SHELLS.

Germans Fired 817,000 in 1870,
French 100,000 in a Day.

Interesting statistics concerning munitions of war are given by a writer in the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin in an article in which the great outcry for more munitions in England and in France is denounced as being insincere and caused chiefly by a desire to explain and excuse the failure of the Allies every time they have assumed the offensive.

The writer attempts to prove that heavy artillery has not, in spite of the prevailing opinion to the contrary, taken the place of the individual soldier in modern warfare. He quotes in support of this argument the bombardment announced by the German General Staff on March 10, when the Allies used 100,000 shells in twenty-four hours on a front of eleven kilometers. The cost of this bombardment is estimated at $1,625,000.

"In the Franco-German war," he says, "a German battery fired on an average 200 shells from each gun. In the Manchurian war the average had already risen to twice that figure. These totals are far exceeded by those of the present war. In the whole of the war of 1870-71 the German artillery fired 817,000 shells. Of these 470,000 were used in the sieges of French fortresses and 338,000 on the field. Of the latter total 10 per cent, was fired off in the battle of St. Privat alone. In the Russo-Japanese war the total was 954,000."

FEED CHILDREN

On Properly Selected Food. It Pays
Big Dividends.

If parents will give just a little intelligent thought to the feeding of their children the difference in the health of the little folks will pay, many times over, for the small trouble.

A mother writes: "Our children are all so much better and stronger than they were before we made a change in the character of the food. We have quit using potatoes three times a day with coffee and so much meat."

"Now we give the little folks some fruit, either fresh, stewed, or canned, some Grape-Nuts with cream, occasionally some soft-boiled eggs, and some Postum for breakfast and supper. Then for dinner they have some meat and vegetables."

"It would be hard to fully describe the change in the children, they have grown so sturdy and strong, and we attribute this change to the food elements that, I understand, exist in Grape-Nuts and Postum."

"A short time ago my baby was teething and had a great deal of stomach and bowel trouble. Nothing seemed to agree with him until I tried Grape-Nuts softened and mixed with rich milk and he improved rapidly and got sturdy and well."

"There's a Reason."

THE GROOMING OF FLOWERS.

Numerous Instruments Are Used By French Florists.

The instruments used by the French florists to prolong the life of cut flowers and remove imperfections are numerous and delicate as those on a well-equipped dressing-table. They include scissors of all sizes and shapes, small cutting-pliers and pinners of many kinds, brushes, atomizers, sprays, and bottles, containing various gums. A withered leaf or even one poorly developed ruin the appearance of a rosebud, consequently the one is cut off, and the other, if possible, is reshaped. The buds are also pierced as near the base of the flowers as possible, with minute wires which keep the leaves in place. An instrument very similar to a curling-iron is used to dress a faulty leaf.

One of the means employed to prolong the life of the flower is to remove the anthers, so as to prevent the spreading of the pollen, for, if fertilization is allowed to take place, the flower has fulfilled its mission and soon fades. In flowers of the lily order the anthers are removed for still another reason. They develop such an abundance of yellow pollen that it falls and taints the leaves, thus marring the spotless white beauty of the flower. The stems of flowers that begin to hang their heads are placed in very hot water for about five minutes, and then are placed in a dark and cool place for about an hour.

ARMENIANS PERSECUTED.

Those Who Escaped Kurds Said to Succumb to Privations.

"The Turks are gradually but effectively exterminating the Armenian people," asserts the Dedeaghat correspondent of the London Times. "The modus operandi is to send from each Armenian village day by day as many persons as a train can carry. When they arrive at Koniah, or some adjacent station, they are turned out, and an escort furnished over the Taurus Mountains."

"Once on the other side, they are supplied with enough food for a few days and told to continue their journey to the neighborhood of Mosul, as they will now be in perfect safety. The region is nothing but a desert, and before many hours marauding bands of Kurds or Bedouins rob and pillage these helpless men, women and children, so that those who are not actually slain die of hunger or thirst. Not one ever reaches the intended destination, for should any one try to escape in another direction, Turkish shepherds have orders to shoot them at sight."

"Many distracted mothers throw their children into the Euphrates rather than see them suffer. Some even sell them for what they will bring before starting on their journey."

"A widely known American missionary who arrived at Constantinople the first week in September, declared he saw as many as 15,000 Armenians collected around one station waiting to be sent on this journey from which none would ever return."

"Chalik-Arass, which resisted disarmament and deportation, is reported to have been bombarded, with the result that the entire population, including the bishop, was killed."

FEATS OF AIR MECHANICS.

The Work Requires Steady Nerves,
for It Entails Great Risks.

The tragic death of a naval air mechanic at Hoo aerodrome, in England, recently, who, after being lifted to a height of 700 feet by a trailer rope of an airship, lost his grip and fell to the ground, calls attention to the dangerous work daily carried out by the men behind the air services. The safety of the aeroplanes and airships used by the Royal Flying Corps and the Naval Air Service are dependent upon the conscientious work of the mechanics. Pilots themselves have not the time to personally examine every strut wire or bolt on their machines before taking them over the enemy's lines, and this important task is left to the "A. M.'s," as they are termed. The work of the air mechanic requires steady nerves, for it entails daily risks.

When airships start on voyages the mechanics, by means of numerous trailer ropes, hold the swaying vessel to earth until the signal is given to let go. In a wind a lighter-than-air machine is a difficult monster to manage. It plunges and rears in the air with the unexpectedness of a broncho, and the mechanics are continually being lifted off their feet as the airship wrenches at the trailer ropes. Were the unfortunate mechanic who became entangled in a rope as the airship rises in the air. He is likely to be lifted to a height of several hundred feet, and to save his neck he must cling to the rope for ten or fifteen minutes while the airship is maneuvered back to earth.

Starting up the powerful aeroplane engines used in military machines is an important task of the air mechanic. He has to swing the 8-foot propeller in the front or rear of an aeroplane and jump to safety before it gets into its stride. The slightest slip would mean disaster, for the large blades of an aeroplane propeller turn a speed of over a thousand revolutions a minute and they will cut through any obstruction with the ease that a razor severs a bar of soap.

In the large type of military or naval aeroplanes, which weigh over a ton, air mechanics often have to ascend with the pilot to tend the engine. If the latter proves refractory a descent is made and the "A. M." has to get to work with his tools, often within range of the enemy's guns. The air mechanic, as many may imagine, does not keep out of danger well in the rear of the firing line. There are times when they have to make venturesome dashes on a motor repair lorry to assist an aviator who has landed close to the enemy's lines. If the aeroplane on such occasions is beyond repair, the mechanics have to put it to pieces and pack it in a lorry, dodging as best they can the shells directed at them from hostile artillery.

Most naval air mechanics are accomplished swimmers, and possess a constitution of iron. When the navy's great seaplanes are launched the mechanics generally have to wade up to their necks into the water to maneuver the machine from the shore. To plunge into icy-cold water in the half light of dawn is not a pleasant task, yet it is one which the sailor mechanics have to carry out almost daily.

In rough seas the waves break over their heads, and the seaplane they are maneuvering is tossed about like a cork. Yet in true naval spirit the mechanics of the Naval Air Service carry out their hazardous duties cheerfully, happy in the knowledge that they are doing their bit toward crushing out the might of the Germans.

Artillery Expert Dies.

The death is announced of Lieutenant Colonel Locarde, a distinguished French artillery expert. His death is said to have been due to overwork. During the present war he introduced several new forms of high explosive projectiles for close range fighting. His is also the credit for the invention of the hydro-pneumatic brake, which is the most novel and important feature of the famous French 75-mm. gun.

YOUNGSTERS PLAY AT WAR.

Children of France in Trenches at Trouville.

The horse races and other social attraction, which bring the elite of society to Trouville, France, at this season every year, are lacking this year, but the famous resort is still lively with a throng that is made up largely of convalescent soldiers and their nurses. Some of the biggest hotels are hospitals, some of the elegant villas also, but there are enough children to prevent the beach from being submerged in "bloom."

The sands of Trouville are also the scene of interesting military operations. All along the beach, from Deauville to Trouville, there is an almost uninterrupted series of trenches for the contingents of 1930 to 1935, now in their fifth to tenth year, who are working under the direction of convalescent soldiers. Bathing is obliged to give the countersign in order to pass, and, then, they are distinctly informed; it is at their own risk and peril, for their are labyrinths everywhere in imitation of those at the front. If a high west wind fills the trenches with sea water, recalling the winter campaign along the Yser, it heightens the joy of the 5 to 10-year-old "poules," who jump into them in their bathing suits and make more noise than ever.

SURGEON READY FOR AIR RAID.

Operated With Lamp When Bomb
Wrecked Electric Plant.

Air raids are becoming so frequent that inhabitants of small towns on the east coast of England are getting used to them. The London Lancet tells the following story of an operation performed during one of the German raids:

"During one of the recent air raids on the east coast a well-known surgeon was performing an operation of tracheotomy at a nursing home when the German aircraft came over the place at night. The town electric current was at once cut off. All the lights went out suddenly, and this too at the very moment when the surgeon in question was opening the windpipe. Fortunately it was not the first attack delivered against this place, a fishing and sea bathing resort.

"Taught by experience, the operator had made it a matter of habit to warn his nurses and other assistants that lamps should be kept ready for use during all operations which had to be undertaken at night. This precaution may have saved the small patient's life. With but a trifling delay the tracheotomy was completed and the child is now doing well.

"To have performed so delicate an operation in such circumstances is a considerable feat, for the raid was a serious one, a good many bombs were dropped, several persons were killed and injured and the feeling at the moment was naturally one of intense apprehension. Some of the bombs hit a house in the neighborhood, the residence of another well-known practitioner. Luckily no one was at home at the time and the medical practitioner got off with the destruction of a certain amount of property. The experience recorded will no doubt influence the taking by medical men generally of the precautions which in this case had been fortunately observed."

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, Etc.

O'Leary Is a Joker, Too.

There is a new story in circulation about Michael O'Leary, the Irish V.C. During his visit to London a compatriot greeted him enthusiastically and begged a single button from his coat. O'Leary, without a smile, answered: "I'll do better than that. A single button is too little for you. Just go across the street there and tell the man inside that I sent you and he will give you an entire set."

The place was a recruiting office.

WAR HITS GLASGOW "PUBS."

Lessening of Hours, Decrease in Drunkenness.

In Glasgow public houses are now permitted to sell liquor five and a half hours a day only. The places are closed in the morning, when drinking would suit a workman for the entire day. Treating and the credit system are done away with, and the practice of carrying drink away in bottles is also forbidden.

Although these new restrictions have been in force but a short time, they have already resulted in a considerable decrease in the arrests for drunkenness. During the week preceding the curtailment of the hours when the houses were open all day, 325 men arrested for drunkenness and 88 women. In the first week that the restrictions were enforced the number of men arrested for drunkenness was 210 and the number of women who were haled before the police courts for the same cause was 84.

TO PROTECT TROOPS.

French Army to Have 200 Travelling Laboratories.

Two hundred travelling toxicological laboratories have been formed by the French army authorities and will shortly leave for the front.

Their main utility will be to insure the health of the soldiers fighting in the trenches or resting in the cantonments. The chemists attached to each laboratory will analyze the water the soldiers drink and the foodstuffs brought to them so as to insure their perfect purity. They will also control the disinfection of the front line trenches whenever that is possible.

A secondary phase of their activities, from which, however, much is expected, will be the analysis of new German methods of attacking by gas bombs, liquid fire or gas clouds.

Each laboratory has attached to it either a skilled doctor or an expert analytical chemist with trained laboratory assistants.

Reassuring Mother.

Edmund had just begun to attend the public school, and had found a new friend, a child of whom Edmund's mother had never heard. "Who is this Walter?" she asked. "Is he a nice little boy?" "Yes, ma'am, he is!" replied Edmund enthusiastically.

"Does he say any naughty words?" pursued his mother. "No," replied Edmund, with emphasis, "and I'm not going to teach him any!"
