DEMI-TASSE

Leon's Logic

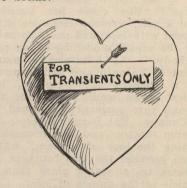

There is a dashing young half-breed out West who desired to make a fine showing in the eyes of his fair Rosalie, and to that end borrowed one dollar in "hard" money from the priest. On the following Sunday while Rosalie looked on in dazzled surprise, Leon clattered two shining fifty-cent pieces on the ringing plate. Three or four weeks afterwards, the good father asked for a return of the loan, to be answered by a look of hurt astonishment.

tonishment.

"Why, fader, I put de money on de plate two-tree weeks ago!"

"But that money belongs to the church, Leon, to the good God. I loaned you my own dollar."

Leon's face brightened. "Oh, now, fader, le bon Dieu, He have gold and silver and plenty ever'ting. Don't silver and plenty ever'ting. Don't you be a fool, fader, you just keep dat dollar."

The Duke and The Reporter

The Duke of Connaught has a large store of good nature which has made store of good nature which has made him a general favourite. During the Boer War, a number of troops were departing from the station, while the Duke, in mufti, was a keen spectator of the scene. A diligent reporter, anxious that his paper should possess a full list of those present, approach a full list of those present, approached the Duke, innocent of his identity and made many personal inquiries, all of which were answered correctly. Then the journalist inquired if the Duke of Connaught had not been ex-The Duke smilingly repected also.

"Well, you may put my name down if you like; but, please don't say I was wearing a gorgeous uniform.

Why He Doesn't

I so admire fair Phyllis My love I would rehearse, And ask her if she'd take me For better or for worse.

But when I read the papers I'm scared almost to death, (For butter's thirty-three now) It takes away my breath.

I'd like to ask fair Phyllis
To share my humble lot,
But eggs are thirty-five now, I'd really better not.

wish to wed sweet Phyllis But then there is the rent, I know I can't afford yet
A handsome fire-proof tent.

So I refrain from asking And merely sigh and sigh; I'd like to marry Phyllis, But prices are so high.
