

"I used to think banks robbed employees of their individuality and gave it back when they retired."

"When it came to picking a career, banking was the last thing on my mind. The reason was, I pictured myself disappearing into the woodwork and surfacing 40 years later with a gold watch, a slap on the back and one of those 'good old boy' retirement parties.

"Brother, was I wrong.
"Before graduating from Laurier, I talked with one of Toronto Dominion's campus recruiters. He stressed the personality of the bank and its people. Plus the fact that I wouldn't get lost in the shuffle—and I could make my own opportunities if I worked hard at it.

"He talked a lot about TD's management opportunities, too. He explained that they were into everything from market research to international banking.

"I was impressed. And so I decided to give TD a chance.

"I started in their Banklab Training Course and it gave me some important insights into management. Then I did some work in research and development, followed by commercial credit training. Now I'm an Assistant Manager of commercial credit—a good job with a lot of responsibility.

"Today, things are moving along just fine. The future looks bright and prosperous. And Tony Busbridge is getting ahead in the world."
