

of the five Nations to joyn with them upon any account whatsoever if you do we will not only come ourselves but with the five Nations and destroy your wives and children two following words unintelligible us for the English regard them not in the least we have had wars with them long enough & leave always prevailed.

Therefore we warn you not to engage in their Quarrell.
If you have any compassion to your childrens children and then you must not assist the English we tell you you plainly that we must destroy you being now ready and fitted for that purpose therefore be quiet and sit still for the English must not think to share us by a joint and pretended expedition by coming to the word unintelligible to eat word unintelligible there soaked in striking waters sure word unintelligible would have eat as well at Albany as there. The English got nothing ^{it} there ^{but} lost ground.

When the above propositions was made the Sachins seemed to be divided in their opinions and those of the French faction prevailing made their answer to the French agent without calling Lawrence Blane the Interpreter to be present neither did he hear what answer they made only the Sachins told him that communicate their answer to Governor of New York when they came to New York to Albany.

The Sachins told the Interpreter plainly that except the selling of Strong drink be wholly & solely forbid it is impossible it impossible to forbid they can live in peace in their houses, they will be necessitated to break up and all the five Nations are of the same opinion and some of the Sachins of the 5 Nations are resolved to goe to New York to request the Assembly to make a strict law against it
