

BEAUTY AND GALLANTRY

Wed With Each Other In Commemoration of Scotland's Patron, St. Andrew, Last Night—Was the Greatest Society Event in Dawson's History—Youth and Loveliness.

St. Andrew's ball, the social event of the year, has once more become a thing of the past—a memory to be fondly gossiped about and thought of in the next twelve months, when, by the past performances of society, there will be a ball that will outdo the splendor of last night's ball. The society has a well-earned reputation for lavish entertainment, and its guests have never been disappointed in the entertainment offered them, last night's having been the grandest and most successful affair that ever gladdened the hearts of Dawson dancers.

At about 9 o'clock the pipes announced that the grand march was forming, and Captain Cosby of the N. W. M. P., dressed in full uniform, stepped off at the side of the piper, and the ball was opened. This march was the most brilliant thus far seen in Dawson, and certainly there will not be another like its gorgeousness for another year, and if it is to be rivaled then it is, to say the least, somewhat difficult to foresee just how it is to be accomplished. Round and round the hall marched the brilliantly dressed concourse, the men, with few exceptions, wearing the conventional claw-hammer coat and showing the broad expanse of shirt bosom, and the ladies—but of them more anon. The march was conducted in a series of the most beautiful and graceful figures, the couples now marching singly, now two abreast, and later four, and then the music stopped and the announcement was made that the first dance would be theancers, the sets for which were thereupon formed, and while the floor was crowded the balcony was filled by eager spectators who looked down upon as beautiful a scene as was ever presented. A tossing sea of color, of life and happy animation, the part of a few numbers of the program had been danced away into the past, Beatrice Lorne appeared upon the stage and sang "The Relief of Lucknow," which, remembering the part the Scottish bag-pipes played on that remarkable occasion, was a very happy thought and was applauded to the echo. The songstress responded to the encore with "Comin' Through the Rye," which was likewise very much appreciated. Later G. H. McLeod favored the assembly with a song entitled, "I'm a Scot," and from the way it was received very little doubt would have been entertained by anyone of the fact that there were several Scotchmen in the house. Miss Katherine Kreig was the next entertainer to engage the attention of the dancers during a breathing space between the dances, and she did so with a drinking song which was vociferously encored and the lady responded by singing, by request, "The Maple Leaf Forever." Four children in the grand march, dressed in plaids and kilts attracted much attention. They were, the Misses Macdonald, daughters of Charles Macdonald, and Masters Regie Williams and Claire Wilson. Later these four children appeared in the role of entertainers, and danced the Highland fling to the music of the bag-pipes in a manner which captivated all who witnessed the performance.

The last to appear on the stage for the purpose of entertaining the merry throng was Piper Henderson who danced the dance that wins the dancer's way to the innermost depths of the Scottish heart, and did it as only a true Highland, who has practiced can. A great many very beautiful as (Continued on page 3.)

How He Loved Her. A negro man went into Mr. E's office for the purpose of instituting a divorce suit against his wife, says Short Stories. A Misanthropic View. "There is a work," said the high-browed youth, "which, even though it may not bring me wealth, will bring me fame." "Again the folly of youth!" sneered the cynic philosopher. "Why will you never realize that fame such as you seek is merely a device of the avaricious world by which a man is kept poor, and by which, at the same time, his creditors are always kept advised of his whereabouts?"

A Necessary Citizen. "It seems to me that you take a great deal of impertinence from that bartender." "Well," answered Broncho Bob, "he's kind of got us where we can't kick. You see, he is not only bartender, but he runs the only undertaker shop in town, and we've simply got to put up with him."—Chicago Tribune.

To Be Perfectly Frank. A gentleman who is no longer young and who never was handsome asked his son's child what he thought of him. The boy's parents were present. "Well, so you won't tell me what you think of me? Why won't you?" "Cause I don't want to get kicked," replied the sprig of a rising generation.—Trib-Bits.

A Wet Revenge. "Yes, I was glad it rained just as hard as it did." "But you were caught out in it." "Yes, I know. But the fact that the end wet hog who made me climb into the car over him got soaked to the bone made amends for everything."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Special Music. At the evening service at the Presbyterian church tomorrow, the following special music will be rendered: "My Faith Looks up to Thee," a sacred duet by Lachner, will be sung by Mrs. Dr. Thompson and Mr. G. FIRE AT THE MUNGER MILL

Spark Ignites Roof and Threatened to Become Serious.

The Munger stamp mill had a narrow escape from destruction by fire yesterday morning and it was only due to the timely action of Captain Spencer, local representative of the syndicate, that the blaze did not prove more serious. At about 10 o'clock in the morning a spark falling on the board roof of the mill building ignited it and when discovered the flames were rapidly securing headway. A few moments quick work extinguished the fire and to prevent further similar accidents the building is being covered with an iron roof. The damage caused was nominal.

IS BOUND OVER FOR TRIAL

Mart Tomerlin, Accused of Holding Up the Dominion Saloon Two Weeks Ago, Has His Preliminary Hearing—Will Be Tried at Next Criminal Court Assizes.

In the police court this morning before Magistrate Macaulay, Mart Tomerlin was bound over for trial before the territorial court upon the charge of highway robbery, the same alleged to having been committed at the Dominion saloon on the morning of Nov. 15. If convicted as charged he may be imprisoned for life and also suffer three floggings, that being the maximum penalty provided by the statutes.

When court convened at 11 o'clock there was the usual crowd of curiously inclined in attendance which nearly filled the room. Edwin Harris was the first witness called for the crown, who stated that he had been in Dawson off and on for over three years, first came here in '98, arrived October 29, 1901, last time, has seen the accused numbers of times, met him once in '98 and frequently since his last arrival in the city; the first time about the first of the month at Brophy's cabin; witness was interested in astrology and conversation with prisoner was principally in relation to such subject; Tomerlin has spoken of casting a horoscope for witness; he first went to prisoner's room with Brophy, who, however, remained but a short time; saw a rifle there standing against the wall on the left hand side of the room as one enters from the hall; was at Tomerlin's room several times subsequent to first visit mentioned; at such times there was no one else present; prisoner told witness he had a number of clients who came to see him for professional advice regarding the buying and selling of mining claims, saying directly afterward, "if you can see anything we can get hold of, we'll get it," witness had replied that such was too strong for him and that he did not want any of that kind of money; prisoner had further said "if you see anything worth going after, we will get it and you will get your bit," witness was employed Wednesday from noon till midnight in the Dominion saloon, the morning of the robbery; in speaking of the robbery prisoner had remarked that it was a "clean job" or something like that; saw him in his office later and the robbery was again spoken of; prisoner asked witness whether or not it was reported that the notes taken were numbered and who if anyone was suspected, never knew prisoner by any other name except Tomerlin.

Frank Stanley testified that he was employed at the Comet barber shop as porter, on the morning of the robbery while emptying the ashes in a barrel at the rear he saw prisoner come down the back steps from his room and go up the alley; he was dressed in yellow canvas coat, high collar, and fur cap with ear flaps, that was between 5:30 and 6 in the morning of the robbery. Robt. Forrest swore to having seen the prisoner on King street near Gandolfo's the morning of the robbery between 12 and 1 o'clock. Phillip Maguire, detective swore to having visited the prisoner's room about 3 p. m. of the day of the robbery, went there for the purpose of searching for evidence; man came in while search was being made and was addressed by prisoner as Mr. Williams; learned later the man was Brophy; found nothing in the search and then went to Brophy's cabin for same purpose, Brophy accompanying the officers; found nothing there; returned to prisoner's room and questioned him as to what had become of his rifle and concerning his whereabouts the night previous; he had replied he had no rifle and the evening before he had gone to his room at 10 o'clock and not gone out again until the following noon; prisoner when placed under arrest had remarked he had no money and his rent was ten days overdue.

Corporal Piper, sworn, was present when prisoner's room was searched; when asked if he had a rifle he had said no; prisoner when asked where he was on night of 15th Nov. had stated he was in his room until 8 or 9 the following morning when he went out to get something to eat; also said he had no money and his room rent was in arrears. Constable Jackson testified that he was present when prisoner was searched after his arrest, found some money in his pockets and in a belt concealed under his trousers was over $600 in currency. This concluded the case for the crown. The prosecutor presented no argument, considering the case strong enough to render it unnecessary. Counsel for defense announced that he would call no witnesses at this time and the magistrate upon consideration remanded the prisoner for trial.

BILLIE BAIRD, Prop.

The Sultan Will Apologize. "All Baba," said the Sultan, after thoughtful consideration of the subject for three consecutive months, do you think the Frenchman is bluffing?" "You might call him a liar."

"Call him a liar, slave?" "That I suppose we apologize again. Shall I write a fresh one?" "Fresh nothing! Send him No. 27 in the U. S. forms. We haven't used that lately."
