A New Flag

A novel flag flying in the zephyr breezes of an electric fan, forms part of a topical window display of a cash register concern on Granville Street. The flag is really two in one, Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes being stitched together back to back. Grouped near are the flags of the allies, and one must see the window to appreciate the point of the display.

We are only concerned in the flag and we think it symbolises the kind of sentiment that there should be more of in Halifax and Canada generally. Our feelings towards our cousins over the border have undergone a complete change since Uncle Sam entered the arena with us, and the sentiment that we foster towards our new ally is growing stronger week by week, as the time arrives for her to take an active part in the cause of freedom for which we are fighting.

That flag represents a wonderful power, the power of the English speaking races of the world, a power that is going to be the guarantee for the future peace of the world, and there will be many more like in the future of this continent. The same idea has been used in New York, and the supply of Union Jacks and Stars and Stripes was exhausted in the endeavor to pay a fitting compliment to Foreign Minister Balfour during his recent visit.

Many Haligonians have probably seen the flag which has been flying in the Granville Street window since the United States declared war, and it is only fair that our city should have credit for an idea that became instantly popular in New York, and we prophecy will be more generally used throughout the Dominion and the United States as time goes on.

According to French military information, the German army consists of 233 divisions, of an average of 13,000 men each, or a total of slightly under 3,000,000. This force can hardly be increased in size. The British and French armies combined are considerably stronger, and at least as good as their foes. Leaving their other allies out of consideration altogether and also Germany's allies, there should be no doubt as to the outcome. Whether the time be long or short, it is the Teutonic partners who will have to yield and pay the price.

U. S. Plans for Vast Fleet of Aeroplanes.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS.

(Special Cable to the Evening Mail)

With the British Armies in the Field, May 31—Nothing America plans to do in fighting Germany has aroused more interest here at the front than the news received today of plans for a vast fleet of aeroplanes, manned by American aviators.

Germany's aerial eye is already badly damaged, the allied supremacy in the air having several times handicapped the enemy. A report recently found on a captured German officer showed that thru lack of proper aerial reconnaissance, Prussian artillery frequently turned their fire on the German instead of British lines.

Four such instances are detailed in the report of this one officer. Each time the Germans turned a terrific barrage fire into their own instead of the enemy's trenches. Their range had not been corrected by aerial observation. In these four instances reported, the killing and maiming of Germans by their own guns forced the evacuation of the trenches thus fired upon.

Not for one moment on these bright summer days do the British fliers stop their eternal aerial offensive of the ground below. There may be periods of rest or lulls, where the opposing armies are either deadlocked or resting, but in the battlefield of the sky is unending war. Indications multiply that the enemy is hard pressed to keep up even the numerical strength of their aerial battalions. German war planes seem to be more flimsy of construction.

Expect Record Apple Crop in United States

New York, May 30th. — With the exception of peaches, the prospect is for an abundant production of all manner of fruit, in practically every section. Because of cold, wet weather, budding was delayed in the more northern latitudes and a forecast is hardly possible, but according to the committee on statistics and standards of the chamber of commerce of the United States, if the fruits withstand climatic conditions for the next month or so the promise is for a large yield. The survey was completed May 12.

The condition of apples, the most important of all fruits, is generally good everywhere throughout the country says Archer Wall Douglas, of St. Louis, chairman of the committee. The usual and inevitable local exceptions to this statement are not of sufficient importance to affect its substantial accuracy.

It has always been an axiom of horticulture that apples do not ever bear heavily two years in succession. However, it seems now as if this belief has been consigned to the scrap heap of discarded traditions. With the increasing proportion of selected types, and the growing employing of intelligent cultivation, the yield of apples, year by year, always barring unfavorable weather seems more assured and dependable than ever before. If the present growing crop gets thru the next six weeks successfully without the disastrous 'June drop' which lighted last season's brilliant promise of both apples and cherries, there seems ahead of us one of the largest yields on record.

May be Further Drop in Flour

Flour men express the opinion that the market is likely to continue down grade as a result of the fact that speculation has been checked. Wheat is expected to act in a more "sane" manner since the prohibition of trading in futures, particularly as the time of the harvest is approaching.

Final Blow to Opium Traffic in China.

Though China has made so brave an effort to stamp out opium the traffic could not cease until March 31, 1917. Up to that time opium could be imported into China from India under a treaty with Great Britain signed in 1911, and this traffic was the monopoly of the Shanghai Opium Combine.

Anticipating the end of the opium connection with Great Britain, the Chinese Government recently communicated with the British Minister in Peking, requesting that a British envoy be deputed to China to head an investigation into the opium suppression campaign in China. At the same time circulars were sent to all the provinces preparing them for the impending complete extirpation of the traffic.

The Shanghai company offered $16,000,000 for the privilege of an extension, and in October last threatened to withhold the duty on the remaining cases imported—a loss to the government of about $5,000,000 but President Li and his cabinet would accept no compromise.—From the "Missionary Review of the World" for May.

The new regulation prohibiting the departure from the Dominion of any male Canadian of military age, is causing a large number of men to be turned back at St. John and at the border. Most of those who have been turned back are men who are natives of Canada, but who have been residing in the United States, and who are returning to their homes. One of the men thus required to remain has a wife and several children across the border, but that made no difference to the officials, whose instructions allow no exemptions. A Canadian who had been a resident of Newfoundland and who was on the way to the States on a business trip also found his journey interrupted for the same reason. As the United States immigration regulations are also more strict than formerly, the number of persons who are being held up is large.

Fertilizer

It is hard to make most of the farmers realize that there is a great possibility of them not being able to get what commercial fertilizer they will require this spring. But never the less it is an absolute fact and the wise farmer will take home his fertilizer soon. As if you wait till spring you may not be able to get any. As even now it is very hard to go what you want as transportation is so bad we have only a few more cars of Basic Slag to sell.

Business Man (to applicant for situation. "Can you write short hand?" Applicant—"Yes, sir."
Business Man—"How many words a minute?"
Applicant—"I've never counted; but the day my wife found in my pocket some letters I'd forgotten to post for her I took down every word she uttered as fast as she said them."
Business Man—"You'll do."

Picking her way daintily through the locomotive works, a young woman visitor viewed the huge operations with awe. Finally she turned to a young man who was showing her through and asked. "What is that big thing over there?"
"That's a locomotive boiler," he replied.
She puckered her brows. "And what do they boil locomotives for?"
"To make the locomotive tender." And the young man from the office never smiled.

A Boston school teacher had read Whittier's "Maud Muller" to her pupils and at the close of her reading spoke of the sorrowful significance of the words "It might have been." She asked the boys and girls if they could think of any four sadder words. One alert youngster of a dozen years held up his hand and said: "I know two sadder words." "What are they?" asked the teacher. "Please remit."

In a recent examination paper for a boy clerk's post was this question: "If the premier and all the members of the cabinet should die, who would officiate?"

Robert, a boy of fourteen thought for a time, trying in vain to recall who came next in succession. At last a happy inspiration came to him, and he answered: "The undertaker."

The Vicar (presenting rose-bowl to Farmer Hodson, the honorable secretary of the local agricultural society): "And w—er—present this—er bowl as an appreciation of you—ah—tenure of office."
Farmer Hodson (indignantly): "Fifteen year, parson, not ten."
