YOUR DIGNITY

If you would be dignified be natural, be kind, be sincere. Never forget the respect due to all human beings, including yourself.

Let your manner imply that mutual respect is recognized as the only possible ground for business dealings, as for more personal relationships. If someone else forgets this, the reason is greater for your remembering it.

Never allow your manner to suggest that you expect deference, on the one hand, or patronage on the other.

Force and fineness of character constitute the only dignity. Nothing hurts dignity so much as thinking about it.

LUMBERJACK'S COAT IS WINTER FASHION

There is almost no limit to the uses to which bright shades of wool can be put in this day and generation; which seems to have a flare for making things of yarn or trimming them with it, and Canadian wools adopt themselves well to a pretty fashion especially popular in the Dominion.

Fashion has many pretty whimsicalities and practicalities, which call for the employment of yarn, and among the later is the lumberjack's jacket, should you be a young person addicted to out-of-door autumnal sports, and of sufficiently romantic turn of mind to want to borrow your costume from the most picturesque of our native costumes.

The lumberjack coat is made of two colors of yarn in block design and so simple to make that anyone who has ever knit a sock can make one if she follows the instructions carefully. It is knitted in a plain stocking stitch. This is one of the most comfortable of all the tribe of sweaters coats, buttoning close up under the chin right down the centre front and has two commodious breast pockets.

In these days of matching accessories, there should be a cap or toque with it, knitted in the same colors, with a turned back band or cuff and on top a big, soft wooly pom-pom. For skating or snow-shoeing, a sash would be very nice, but not essential. Gloves or mitts, and stockings should be knitted of the same colors, but if you prefer, your cap and gloves or mitts might be knitted of brushed wool. This ensemble should be worn with a cloth skirt, or solid color with a kick pleat in the front and at the sides.

Scarfs give it a chic and cosy appearance that it is no wonder they are so popular and one of the joys of the wardrobe. The indications are that they will be worn more than ever this autumn and some of the prettiest are knitted of a yarn so soft and fine that they remind one of a cobweb. These are worn under a coat or thrown over the shoulders with an evening dress. Some are lovely in rainbow tints and others are one color in the centre, sombre tinted towards the fringed ends.

Bags are closely allied to scarfs, for they often match. One particularly interesting kind is made on a canvas foundation and worked in wool in a Florentine design. The wool is usually shaded and two sets of colors are used—say brown shaded from dark to light and terra cotta, shaded from dark to light. These bags are about twelve inches by thirteen inches with top handles worked with the wool. Some shops sell the canvas with a sample of the pattern worked.

Canadian women have apparently a special gift for this branch of the handicrafts, and produce some very beautiful work. In fact there are few Canadians who admit being unable to use knitting needles.

Radium Hot Springs In The Rockies

Radium Hot Springs near the Sinclair Canyon on the Banff-Windermere Highway, operated by the government in connection with which a bungalow camp has been erected by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Inset and lower left—Radium swimming Pool operated by Mr. Heap Holland on the government road from Lake Windermere to Cranbrook. It has a maximum temperature of 120° degrees and Mr. Holland intends to make it an all-year resort.

Sixty-four years ago, when Sir George Simpson was making the first overland tour around the world, he came across some hot springs on the western slopes of the Rocky Mountains which the local Kootenay Indians frequented on account of their curative properties.

As the white settlers came in after the Wild Horse Creek Gold Rush, these came to be called The Fairmont Hot Springs, and became a well known landmark on the Government road from Lake Windermere to Cranbrook. In 1912 an English rancher, Mr. Heap Holland, purchased them and erected bathing facilities, and two years ago made extensive improvements in connection with his development of a bungalow camp. The waters on analysis proved to contain a higher percentage of radium in solution than any other Springs on the American Continent, higher even than those at Arkansas, in addition to valuable curative deposits of magnesium and lime. The Canadian Pacific Railway had obtained right of way through his property in consideration of calling their station Radium, and these Radium Hot Springs now attract many visitors, the camp having a capacity for seventy persons.

A special bath is now being constructed for the Indians, under the superintendence of Louis Arbel, the Kootenay Chief, while the white folk have a spacious swimming pool surrounded by scrupulously clean dressing rooms. There is a tennis court and horses with guides are available for riding the neighboring trails, while large numbers of automobilists visit the Springs during the summer months. Mr. Heap Holland has the intention of making this an all-year resort, as the waters have a temperature of 120° and never freeze.

The only fly in the ointment is that the Government operates rival hot Springs on the Banff-Windermere Road, which are also called Radium Hot Springs, this being the post office address. These Springs are also highly curative, and have also a neighboring bungalow camp which was erected by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and is operated very successfully by the Misses Armstrong. The Government Hot Springs were for many years known as the Sinclair Hot Springs, being named after James Sinclair, an old time pioneer, who is the first known white man to have crossed the Sinclair Pass in 1842. The virtues of these Springs were known not only to the Indians but to the animals, and it is credibly reported that in the old days bears used to bathe their paws in the waters to secure relief from rheumatism. While there is a natural confusion through the duplication of names, both resorts are rapidly increasing in popularity, chiefly owing to the increase in automobile traffic through the Rockies.
