Poetry.

The Church of the Heart.

By REV. CHAS. WHEELER DENISON.

There was a time, in summer days,
When the warm sun withheld its rays:
Far over hill, and vale and plain,
Showered the cold dews of dreary rain;

The August leaves shed dripping glints;
September drew no painted dais;
Black autumn winds bore on the wing
The misty waves of early Spring.

While many a sunny eve glowed
Wore the thick veil of Winter's shade.
The rainbows, in their promised way,
Bent o'er the sky their arch of spray;

Soft vapours passed the western sphere.
The sunbeams faded clear:
The birds flew back, in verdant throngs,
And filled the air with tuneful songs;

But still, on country and on town,
The deluge of the rain came down.
Full haunts of pleasure lost their crowds:
Rich raiment was stripped by marky clouds;

Music and dancing dragged through Insipid scenes of dismal hue:
Down by the sea a pall of gloom
Hung dark, like shroudings of the tomb;

While scattered groups in sadness trod
The pathway to the house of God.

One holy church there yet remained—
A church where temper never reigned,
Where never raging billow dashed,
Nor thunder rolled, nor lightning flashed—

A church where sunshine poured its calm,
In hallowed chant, in sacred psalm.
To truth and holiness enriched,
Fit temple of a righteous mind.

All dedicate to praise and prayer,
Happy the soul that worshipped there!
His mental tortures greatly swell
With cheerful notes of Sabbath bell;

His long-drawn sighs are softly stirred
With echoes of the living Word,
While from the chancel to the choir,
Sings up to heaven the vocal fire.

Let the floods rage; let the sky fall;
Let dread pervade our earthly ball;
There still remains, from pole to pole,
A church within the good man's soul.

Where by sweet fields, by purring streams;
Pierced by the wind, by rushing gleams;
Perennial sunlight softly gleams:
Where worship, glad, loving, warm,
Above all creed, beyond all form,
Ascends through an ethereal zone,
To bow at an eternal throne.

Here spirit-lights ever bright
His answer from the Book of Light:
Here blessings of His own rewards
Four on us from the Lord of lords,
While angels, bending from the skies,
Join in the kindled sacrifice.

Oh be our choice this better part—
The church within a Christian heart!

Miscellaneous.

Terrors of the Lancing Room.

A Miss Robinson, of the 7th concession of the township of Peel, died recently in a very sudden manner.

On the night previous to her death
she attended a party held in connection with a barn raising in the vicinity.

For some time previously she had been under the care of a physician, who warned her against engaging in the practice of dancing.

However, she heeded not his admonitions, but indulged her passion for this amusement without restraint.

It is stated that during one month of the past winter she attended about twenty of these parties, distance being no obstacle. On the evening of the party above referred to, her mother and sister endeavored to dissuade her from going, but in vain.

She went and was almost constantly on the floor until after midnight,
when in the midst of the giddy whir
she fainted. Shortly after recovering she resumed dancing, but with the same result. This took place three times, and on being requested not to dance, she replied she would, sustaining she should die. When starting for home in company with another lady and gentleman she was apparently as well as usual, before reaching home her body became badly swollen as to necessitate the loosing of her clothing by her companions.</
