

The Charlottetown Herald.

NEW SERIES

CHARLOTTETOWN, PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, WEDNESDAY, MAY 3, 1911

Vol. XL, No. 18

There Are No Drugs
IN OUR
TOBACCO!

We guarantee this statement. Does not bite or burn, but gives a good cool, satisfying smoke.

BRIGHT CUT
—AND—Perique Mixture

In tins and packages, at Grocers and Druggists.

HICKEY & NICHOLSON Tobacco Co., Ltd.
Ch'town, Phone 345. Manufacturers.

BUSINESS MEN

Will require few supplies of

Office Stationery

Beginning with the NEW YEAR, we carry a splendid up-to-date stock of

Blank Books, in Ledgers, Cash books,
Day Books, Letter books, Bill books, Journals, and Blank Books of all kinds and sizes.

Office Supplies in Invoice and Letter Files and Binding Cases.

Carter's "Success" Binding Cases (none better)
complete at $2.50 per dozen in dozen lots,
$3.00 in less than dozen lots.

The best of Inks, Pens, Pencils, Account
Paper, Foolscap, Type Writer Paper,
Carbon Paper, &c., &c.

ONE MILLION ENVELOPES in stock, all grades, all the standard sizes. Ask to see
"Carter's Special" White Wove Envelopes size 7, for Accounts only. $1.00 per thousand in lots of two thousand and over only 90 cents. Big value for the price. We have 50 thousand of this line.

We are headquarters for General Stationery and Office Supplies.

Wholesale & Retail. Lowest Prices.

CARTER & CO., Ltd.

HARDWARE!

Largest Assortment,
Lowest Prices.

WHOLESALE and RETAIL

Fennel and Chandler

UNEXCELLED FOR Time Keeping

An Exclusive Guarantee Given With These Watches.

GENTS' SIGNET RINGS MAIL ORDERS for Goods of PLAIN RINGS Watch Repairs promptly at-GEM RINGS tended to Spectacles with lenses fitted to each eye separately, and with due regard to style and comfort.

Chains, Studs, Brooches, Pins
Locketts, Opera & Field Glasses,
Compasses, Telescopes.

SILVERWARE — The best quality.

E. W. TAYLOR,
South Side Queen Square, City.

Tea Party Supplies.

We are headquarters for Tea Party and Picnic Supplies. We carry a large stock of all requirements for the catering business, such as Confectionery, Cigars, Nuts, Fruits, etc.

SODA DRINKS.

We also manufacture a full line of Sodas, such as
Ginger Ale, Cream Soda, Raspberry, Iron Brew, Hop
Tonic, etc.

We have just been appointed Agents for the

Land of Evangeline
Pure Apple Cider

The Pure Juice of Choice Nova Scotia Apples.

This Cider is quite non-intoxicating and can be handled by stores, restaurants, etc. It is put up by a special English process which prevents any excessive amount of alcohol, but retains the exquisite flavor of the Annapolis Valley Fruit. No chemicals of any kind are used in the manufacture—it is just a Pure Fruit Juice, and will remain sweet and clear and sparkling indefinitely in any climate.

A READY SELLER.
In Casks, Pints and Split Bottles. Write us for prices.

EUREKA TEA.

If you have never tried our Eureka Tea it will pay you to do so. It is blended especially for our trade, and our sales on it show a continued increase. Price 25 cents per lb.

R. F. Maddigan & Co.
Eureka Grocery,
QUEEN STREET, CHARLOTTETOWN.

In the Catholic Encyclopedia.

MIVART.

Professor Mivart's biography falls to Canon Francis Aveling, who treats it with lucidity and discretion. This remarkable man, whom Darwin called "the distinguished biologist," was the son of Evangelical parents and was a convert to Catholicism at the age of seventeen. He studied law and was called to the Bar, but never practised, and gave himself up entirely to science. He became a member of the Royal Society at the early age of forty, his sponsor being Huxley. In 1871 he took his stand as the chief opponent of the Darwinian hypothesis; his scientific reputation being in no wise impaired by the position he took up. Darwin did him the honour of dealing with his objections at great length. Mivart professed a theory of evolution, but he consistently asserted the difference between the animate and the inanimate. But towards the end of his life his speculations began to verge on an interpretation of dogma incompatible with the Faith. His articles in the "Nineteenth Century" from 1885 to 1892 were put on the Index. Finally he wrote some very unorthodox articles to the magazines in January, 1900, causing him to be inhibited from the sacraments. He died of diabetes in April, 1900. His friends, persuaded that the nature of his illness offered a complete explanation of the amazing inconsistency of his final position with what he had maintained during the greater part of his life, obtained the highest medical testimony freeing him from the responsibility for the heterodox opinions he had voiced. His disease, not his will, was the cause. Much delay occurred; but Archbishop Bourne in 1904 permitted the reinterment in consecrated ground.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

MONTENEGRO.

The country of the Black Mountain, usually known as Montenegro, receives excellent attention at the hands of Prof. Joseph Lins. This, the youngest and one of the smallest, if not the smallest European Kingdom, has a romantic history. The people are Serbs, that is, they belong to that distinct Slavic race whose country is divided politically into the states of Serbia, Bosnia, Herzegovina, and Montenegro. Owing to its mountainous and inaccessible character, and the hardness of the inhabitants, this country of Montenegro maintained its independence better against the Turks than other lands more favoured by nature. It is interesting to note that this little state was once a prince-bishopric, in 1516. Of the present reigning house, Vladika Peter I (1777-1830) was a hero, and saint; he repelled a fierce attack of the Turks in 1796, and assisted the Russians against the French. His people proclaimed him a saint in 1834.

Of the quarter of a million inhabitants, only some 13,000 are Catholics. There are even more Mohammedans than Catholics, but the vast majority of the population belong to the Greek Church. The Catholic Archbishop of Antivari has ex officio a seat in the popular assembly, the Skupstina.

MELBOURNE.

In the article Melbourne, Canon Patrick Phelan gives an excellent historical and statistical account of the Catholic Archdiocese of that name. The city was in 1841 known as Port Phillip Settlement, and had a population of 11,738, including 3,411 Catholics. The settlement became the Colony of Victoria in 1850; the Catholic population was now 18,000. After the gold rush to Ballarat and other mining centres the Catholic population increased so rapidly that the then diocese of Melbourne was divided into three dioceses, while it became metropolitan. The first archbishop, Most Rev. James Goold, made a determined fight against the State system of purely secular education, and displayed the greatest zeal in ensuring that, at all costs, the Catholic children of Victoria should be provided with a good Catholic education. His successor, Archbishop Carr, brought to a successful issue the completion, entirely free of debt, of the magnificent Cathedral of St. Patrick, which is a lasting memorial of the piety and charity of Ireland's sons beyond the sea, where, under happier circumstances, they are enabled to rear children which dwarf even the noble faces of their native land. On the archbishop's silver jubilee over 10,000 found accommodation in this stately temple. The Catholics of the Archdiocese are almost entirely Irish, and the clergy were exclusively so until recent years, when vocations among the Australians have become very numerous.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

lish fluently. Until his twentieth year he worked at trades during the day and in the evening attended night school. With the money he earned he educated his brother, the celebrated Dr. Emil Reich, and contributed to the support of his family, in which he was the oldest child. At the age of twenty-two he was in business for himself, furnishing illustrations to publishers in the form of photogravure plates, half-tone plates, woodcuts and original photographs from nature or paintings. He was very painstaking and conscientious. Once after he had been bending over the maps of the Catholic Encyclopedia day and night for months, his daughters wanted him to join them for a little recreation, so they suggested that he locate the Bishop's sees anywhere, and that no one would overtake the trouble to find out whether they were in the right place or not. But he said: "Yes, but I would know." And he stayed on at his work till midnight. He had never taken a vacation in thirty years, except on Sundays and holidays, and at these times, although he was at home, he worked on as usual. Before his death Mr. Reich had nearly completed the series, and had laid down the lines for executing the few maps that still remain to be prepared.—Standard and Times.

MELBOURNE.

In the article Melbourne, Canon Patrick Phelan gives an excellent historical and statistical account of the Catholic Archdiocese of that name. The city was in 1841 known as Port Phillip Settlement, and had a population of 11,738, including 3,411 Catholics. The settlement became the Colony of Victoria in 1850; the Catholic population was now 18,000. After the gold rush to Ballarat and other mining centres the Catholic population increased so rapidly that the then diocese of Melbourne was divided into three dioceses, while it became metropolitan. The first archbishop, Most Rev. James Goold, made a determined fight against the State system of purely secular education, and displayed the greatest zeal in ensuring that, at all costs, the Catholic children of Victoria should be provided with a good Catholic education. His successor, Archbishop Carr, brought to a successful issue the completion, entirely free of debt, of the magnificent Cathedral of St. Patrick, which is a lasting memorial of the piety and charity of Ireland's sons beyond the sea, where, under happier circumstances, they are enabled to rear children which dwarf even the noble faces of their native land. On the archbishop's silver jubilee over 10,000 found accommodation in this stately temple. The Catholics of the Archdiocese are almost entirely Irish, and the clergy were exclusively so until recent years, when vocations among the Australians have become very numerous.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

MELROSE ABBEY.

Melrose Abbey receives excellent and adequate attention at the hands of Father Michael Barrett, O. S. B. This, the first of the Cistercian houses in the country, was one of the numerous foundations of Saint David I, King of Scotland, whom his descendant James I of Scotland in this connection apostrophized as having been "ane sair anet for the Croon." Melrose suffered much from marauders; Edward II, Richard II, and Henry VIII of England pillaged it. Robert Bruce's generosity made possible the commencement of a noble fabric, largely completed two centuries later, in English Perpendicular, and distinguished for the fairy-like lightness of its carvings and window tracery. Succeeding sovereigns and countless benefactors so richly endowed Melrose that its annual revenue could not have fallen far short of £100,000. But the expenditure was conducted on equally generous lines. During a time of famine in the twelfth century, four thousand starving people were fed by the monastery for three months. Abbot Jocelin was afterwards Bishop of Glasgow, where he got the fine cathedral of that city as a shrine for St. Mungo's body. The vast possessions of the abbey finally came to the family of the Dukes of Buccleuch. The beautiful fabric was destined, after having been devastated by a rabble of so-called reformers in 1569, to be pulled down piecemeal for building material. Here as elsewhere in Scotland, the sign of an exquisitely sculptured stone on the wall of a lowly cottage or on a quiet farm "bigging" is a faithful reminder of the devotion and munificence of long-dead Catholic Scots.

All Skin Diseases
Can be Directly Traced To BAD BLOOD.

Therefore to get rid of these skin diseases it is absolutely necessary that the blood should be thoroughly cleansed of the accumulated poisons, and for this purpose there is nothing so equal Burdock Blood Bitters.

This remedy has been on the market for over thirty-five years and when you use it you are not experimenting with some new and untried remedy.

Miss Stella Eichel, Mattland Park, N.S., writes:—"I have been bothered with Salt Rheum on my hands for three years and it tickled so I didn't know what to do. I tried everything but nothing seemed to be any good. I heard of Burdock Blood Bitters and bought two bottles of it, and now I am perfectly cured and have no Salt Rheum on my hands any more. I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters."

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"Lobelia," demanded Mr. McSwat, "where is my pipe?"

"It was sailing out through the kitchen window the last time I saw it," answered his wife.

"It was, hey? You promised me when I got those tickets to the opera you never would touch my pipe again! Have you forgotten that?"

"I didn't touch it, Belinger; I took the tongs to it."

Minard's Liniment cures Neuralgia.

"I want a pair of button shoes for my wife."

"This way, sir. What kind do you wish, sir?"

"Doesn't matter—just so they don't button in the back."

Minard's Sterling Headache Powders give women prompt relief from monthly pains and leave no bad after effects whatever. Be sure you get Milburn's. Price 25 and 50 cts.

An Alabama negro was defended in court by Senator Morgan. Having elected the negro of the charge, the senator said to him: "Rastus, did you really steal the mule?"

"Well, Marse Morgan, it was just like this," said Rastus: "I really thought I did steal that mule, but after what you said to the jury I was convinced I didn't."

There is nothing harsh about Lax-Liver Pills. They cure Constipation, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, and Bilious Spells without griping, purging, or sickness. Price 25 cts.

"What, buying jewelry in this expensive shop? I wonder you can afford to pay their prices."

"Oh, my wife always manages to smile 20 per cent off."

Mary Ovington, Jasper, Ont., writes:—"My mother had a badly sprained arm. Nothing we used did her any good. Then father got Hagyard's Yellow Oil and it cured mother's arm in a few days. Price 25 cts."

"Did that explorer suffer any physical ailment as a result of his trip to the Arctic regions?"

"Yes."

"What was it?"

"Writer's cramp."

A Sensible Merchant.

Milburn's Sterling Headache Powders give women prompt relief from monthly pains and leave no bad after effects whatever. Be sure you get Milburn's. Price 25 and 50 cts.

"It was very romantic," says the friend, "He proposed to her in the automobile."

"Yes?" we murmur, encouragingly.

"And she accepted him in the hospital."

Had Severe Pains
In Back.
Felt As If It Must Break.

Mr. Alfred E. Davis, Gorrie, Ont., writes:—"For some years I suffered from severe pains in my back, and could hardly work at all, and when I stooped down to pick up anything I felt as if my back must break. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and after taking two boxes was entirely cured, and I feel that I cannot speak too highly in your favor."

"This was nearly four years ago and I still remain cured."

For Backache, Lame Back, Weak Back, there is no remedy equal to Doan's Kidney Pills for taking out the stitches, twinges and twinges, limbering up the stiff back and giving perfect comfort.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. In ordering direct specify "Doan's."

After a discussion lasting for half a century, France has finally abandoned the historic meridian of Paris and adopted that of Greenwich. The new time standard was legally adopted on February 13th, but it went into effect only on March 11th, when at midnight all French clocks were stopped for nine minutes and twenty seconds. This change is welcomed by astronomers particularly, as heretofore they will be dispensed from the necessity of reducing their observations of Greenwich time, and inversely those in Greenwich time to Paris time.