son and Miss Magdalene Moore gave a Hallowe'en party. The gentlemen's invitations read as follows:

"Misses Ruth and Magdalene on Hallowe'en inght
Purpose to give you a few hours' delight.
The grils, by witches, at some house will be hidden.
And when found by the boys, to Moore's home all are hidden."
After considerable searching the boys located the girls at the Wilkinson home and all masked in sheets and pllow sips. Upon their arrival at the spot for the evening's delight, the company were seized with a creepiness from the gruesome decorations. The lights were darkened with spooky shades, mother goose and her broom was in evidence upon the mass of grease and rubbish in a coal blank provers of the wells, arise of the wells, tries of owls in different corners, a huge bat hovered over to witches' den, boogy faces were mettiches' den, boogy faces were metheleling.
