LOND

LONDON, April

ROYALTY AND EAST

The Eastertide brought Queen some welcome from the strenuous life she have been leading without cessation since her Majesty's departure from London for India. Her Majesty is in need of a rest, for in one who is closely associated with the Queen's daily progress, it is not a surprise that her Majesty is at Buckingham Palace her mornings are occupied with correspondence, and war has increased her duties, and personally domestic arrangements. In the afternoon there are receptions to the Queen, who hear very little of the day which are not very pleasant to her Majesty. She visits to workrooms of hours at St. James's Palace, and the Queen's presence from London is not expected to remain in town.
