Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE HARE AND THE TORTOISE.

A friend of mine, a young middle aged woman, is taking up this year a Saturday course in current events and a correspondence course in Spanish. She is a busy woman, a minister's wife with two children in high school and so it means careful planning to find the time. When people ask her why she tries to do this with all the rest, she says, "Well, you know, I didn't go to college and I'm trying to catch up. My children are going to college and I don't want them to leave me behind."

This woman has kept up her French ever since she left high school. She attended a conversation class for some years, then combined business and education (one cannot teach without learning) by tutoring some girls who were preparing for college. When she reads her Bible at night, she reads a French testament. She is a far better French scholar than most of the college graduates I know.

Some of the Things This Woman Has Done.

Last year she took a course in sociology at the college near which she lives.

The year before that she took the course in political economy, which was the foundation for the sociology course. "You can't imagine how much understanding both these courses have given me of all this Capital and Labor trouble," she says.

She is an owner—and what is more a reader—of one of the famous five-foot bookshelves.

Hardly a year has gone by since her marriage, except when the children were babies, that she did not take at least one course in the nearby college.

And in those homekeeping years she took a correspondence course each year.

Whenever anyone asks her why she is so persistent, she always makes substantially the same answer as I quoted above.

She Has That Need No Longer.

"Well, you see, I didn't go to college and I've got to catch up."

It is my opinion that she has no need to catch up. For I think she has long since passed the average college graduate. A college education is a splendid thing but oh, so few can have it. Did you know that only 4.3 per cent. of all the children enrolled in the American schools finish the eighth grade. I didn't until I read it in a magazine article lately. Of course only a small per cent. of those go on through high school, and a still smaller per cent. of those go on through college.

Probably a Fraction of One Per Cent.

You can imagine what relation these last bear to the children of the country.

That is a saddening thought, isn't it? Thank Heavens, for men and women like my friend, who take some of the sadness out of it by proving that if one really wants to be educated, one can be without benefit of college.

ON THE JOB.

It is a pleasant thing to find the man who knows his trade; he ornaments the human kind, his fame will never fade. I take my car to divers shops to have the works repaired, what time the carburettor pops, and busted wires are bared. And one will toil around all day, and make the blamed thing worse; and if he duly gets his pay, he cares no tinker's curse. Another breaks a costly piece as with a sledge he beats; one smears a lot of rancid grease upon the velvet seats. And then I find the able gent who knows just what to do; he finds the rinkum that is bent, the one's that's broke in two. He diagnoses in yold boat as some great surgeon might, and he restores my errant goat, and fills me with delight. In ten brief minutes he has found just why the motor struck; he deftly makes the wheels go round, and takes me one buck. His shirt is damp with motor oils, he is in grime arrayed, but has my blessing as he toils—the man who knows his trade.

POOR LITTLE FELLOW.

Poor little fellow, your case is sad. You must go to school when you'd like to play. And you want to be old like your dotting dad. Who may come and go in his own sweat way. And you seldom have travelled on railroad trains. And never alone you may wander far. You long to be done with your growing pains. And get off there where the big men are.

Poor little fellow, your life is hard. There are so many things that you may do. So many pathways to you are barred. And so many rules that are made for you. Oh, you see men come and you see them go. Old and battered and worn and gray. And to win the freedom you think they know. You would fling all of your youth away.

Poor little fellow, time was that I looked out on the world through the self-same eyes. And the years seemed long and I wondered why. I couldn't be old and grown and wise. Then I used to dream of the days to be. And the joys I'd claim and the things I'd do. When the years had fashioned a man of me— Now I'd give them all to be just like you.

Poor little fellow, don't sigh for age. For the years are swift and their cars are great. Bitter the battles that men must wage. As grown-ups learn when it's all too late. Oh soon, too soon, shall you come to see. When the work of the world shall be yours to do. Why there's never a man but would gladly be. A poor little fellow once more like you.
