Rev. Dr. Parker of the City Temple's Relations With Salisbury, Gladstone and Beaconsfield.

(Review of the book of reminiscences recently published by Rev. Dr. Parker, of London, Eng.)

First, it should be explained on behalf of the author that the book comprises a series of imaginary interviews obtained with the aid of a machine invented by himself and known as "the dreamograph." Everybody whom the world has known in the present generation, from Lord Beaconsfield to Henry Ward Beecher, is introduced. This, for instance, about Lord Salis-

Lord Salisbury sent for me. He was very pleasant. "Parker," said he, "drop in any time you are passing and take pot-luck," I replied: "The same to you, and many of them." I was nervous. It was in the middle of May, yet through sheer nervousness I was on the point of saying: "I wish you a happy New Year." I am the only Dissenting minister who is on bing terms with a real Marquis. This makes Dissent almost respectable. On this ground I have been asked to join the local tennis club. The clubbers did not name my blazing genius, my unfathomable erudition, o my lovely disposition; they remarked only on my friendly relation to the Marquis. What is the chief end of man? To know a Marquis and glorify

Of course, Mr. Gladstone comes next, and to this effect:
Been at Hawarden. Spent week with Mr. Gladstone. We spoke a new lan-guage each day, fluently beginning with the Chinese. I got up my sub-jects, and took good care always to start the conversation myself, so that could extemporize my boundless I well remember beginning on the Round Towers of Antrim, knowing how deeply he was interested in all Irish questions. I thought would like to know something about the round towers, as I supposed his studies had never taken him into such a subject. In polished Chinese I discanted on the three round towers in Antrim, which I described as a maritime county, and even ventured to say that it was in the glorious province of Ulster. I told him that one round tower at Antrim was 95 feet high. I was very eloquent on the three round towers. Mr. Gladstone listened intentso I felt I was making an impression upon him. When I paused for a moment, he briefly remarked: "You have overlooked the fourth of the Antrim towers—only a fragment it is true—near the old church of Trum-

I got up my own genealogy, and put into his hands the ancient charter, by which we reserved the right to hang ourselves, if we felt so disposed: Manda-vimus enim ballivo libertatis prelicte quod ad certos dies, etc. Having glanced at this. Ben said I might sit lown, and welcome. He said he had respect for the men of the Tyne, north and south, He asked me how things were getting on at the Devil's Water, and I said, "Pretty middlin'; hoo's yersel'?" He seemed puzzled.

Just as the Shark Was About to Grab Him a Swordfish Got the Shark.

New Orleans Times-Democrat. "Speaking of wonderful adventures," said the retired sea captain, "I doubt if anything ever was more wonderful than the one I'm going to tell you. It happened a good many years ago, but that doesn't alter its excellence nor interfere with its truth. I was first mate on the Lovely Lou of Bangor, and we had been on our way to South America, for about four weeks. The wind had left the ship during the last day of this period, and we were dipping our peak to a rolling swell that seemed to come from nowhere and return to the same place without making a ripple on the blue surface of the ocean. The sails were all set and their shadows fell clear upon the glassy surface, but where the sun fell the water was as clear as crystal. We were well within the tropics then, and several big sharks had been seen playing about the ves-sel. Suddenly there came a splash, and the cook ran to where I was standing, on the poop deck, crying that one of the sailors had tumbled poard. The Lou had no way, and I laughed at the idea of him drowning, telling the cook to throw him a rope, walking to the rail as I did so. The sailor was swimming about, the quarter, enjoying his bath, when I sudfrom the ship. I yelled for the rope, and as I yelled I saw the fin move toward the sailor, cutting the water like a knife. I knew that unless the man was taken out quickly he would be devoured, and rushed to the cabin grating to get a line. Seizing a piece of rope I hurried to the rail just in time to see the form of an immense shark turn on its side to seize sailor. As he did so there was an instant's glimpse of a long, brown body, and then the water was slashed into a sea of yeasty foam, the shark seemingly being in trouble. I threw the line, and in a moment the sailor was aboard, scared out of his wits, but safe and sound. The threshing in the water still continuing, we proceeded to investigate, and directly we were able by a large swordfish, the sword running through the jaws of the shark in such a manner as to prevent the fish from opening them. Whether the shark's antagonist had deliberately attacked the shark we know not, but its timely and unexpected appearance saved the sailor's life beyond a doubt, as another instant would have sent of the man. We managed to release
