home is a dark red wine, containing a full share of sunshine, called Loupillon, and is grown by M. Fallieres himself at his country place near Agen, where he was re-elected senator a few days ago by an overwhelming majority. He is an appreciative musician, differing in this respect from M. Loubet, who does not care at all for music, and his favorite composer is Mozart. M. Fallieres seldom goes to the theater, but is well versed in dramatic literature, and it was he who first proposed that the Cross of the Legion of Honor should be conferred on Mounet-Sully, of the Comedie Francaise. M. Fallieres is a strong advocate of a progressive income tax, and proclaims the necessity of coalition with all the groups of the parliamentary left.
