Two Interesting Letters

Toronto, Ontario.—"When my husband was called back to England in 1914 I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to strengthen me so I could work. I had a trouble that used to make me weak, but I am able to do my work now and am perfectly satisfied with your medicine. I still get it at the chemist's and I strongly recommend it to anybody I hear of suffering as I did. You may publish this if you wish."—Mrs. E. H. Henshaw, 899 Yonge St., Toronto, Ontario.

I Did Not Feel Like Working
"I was in a general run-down condition with a weak back and a tired feeling so that I did not feel like working. My mother was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and recommended it to me, so I have taken it and my back is better and I am now able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my neighbors and you may publish my letter."—Mrs. JOSEPHAT A. GRENIER, Box 47, Carbon, Alberta.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken when you first notice such symptoms as nervousness, backache, weakness and irregularity. It will help you and prevent more serious trouble. Give it a fair trial.

FIERY, ITCHY SKIN QUICKLY SOOTHED WITH SULPHUR

Menth-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is, covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing soothes fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist. The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops, and after two or three applications the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. Menth-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

A small jar of Menth-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store. —Advt.

The Kaiser's Memoirs

By WILHELM VON HOHENZOLLERN, (Former Emperor of Germany)

CHAPTER VII. Science and Art.

THE broad and many-sided field whose care devolved upon the ministry of public worship and instruction—embracing art, science, research, medical matters, etc.—always aroused my lively interest and enlisted my efforts in its behalf.

Special pleasure was afforded me by the development of the Technical High School. The increasing importance of technical matters drew ever larger numbers of the ablest youths to institutions of learning of this description, and the achievements of the teachers there and of the young engineers who were graduated constantly brought new laurels to the German name.

Among the teachers at Charlottenburg one of the most prominent and best known all over the world was Prof. Dr. Slaby. Until his death he had constant dealings with me and kept me informed concerning the newest inventions by means of captivating discourses. These were given not only in his laboratory, but also in the quiet hunting lodge in the forests of Brandenburg, where I, together with the empress, surrounded by a few intimates, used to listen eagerly to Slaby's words. Slaby was also dear to me as an individual and as a man. He was a quiet, unassuming, but a very much more cheerful person than his simple, clear views on every possible sort of thing in this world, which he could always express in the most stimulating and entrancing manner. Slaby meant much to me, and I felt grateful affection for him up to the time of his death.

Influenced by the achievements of the technical high schools and of such men as Slaby, Intze, and so on, I resolved to grant the high schools the same privilege of representation in the Prussian upper house as was enjoyed by the universities. But the universities protested vehemently against this to the minister of public worship and instruction, and there ensued a violent fight against the classical-scientific arrogance of the savants, until I finally enforced my will by a decree. Slaby received the news from me by telegraph in his laboratory while he was delivering a lecture, and gave it to the students, who burst into wild cheers. The technical high schools have shown themselves worthy of the honor conferred upon them.

In view of the constantly more violent fight for the markets of the world and its outlets, it became necessary, in order to utilize the wisdom of the leaders of German science in this direction, to provide them with more freedom, quiet, possibility for work, and materials. Many savants of importance were hampered in their work by their activities as teachers, so that the only time they had left over for research was their vacation. This state of affairs resulted in overwork and over-burdening, which had to be stopped.

Chemical Research. Attention was turned first to improvements in the domain of chemistry. Minister von Hertefeld, Director of the Ministry of Education, having grasped the state of affairs with clear understanding, made possible for me the establishment of the "Kaiser Wilhelm Society" and drew up the statutes governing it. In the short time of its existence it has achieved brilliant results and given me an opportunity, at its general meetings, to become acquainted with eminent men in all branches of knowledge, in whom I thereafter entered into regular intercourse. I also visited their laboratories, where I could follow the progress of their labors. New laboratories were founded, others subsidized from the contributions of the senate and members of the organization.

I was proud of this creation of mine, since it proved a boon to the Fatherland. The inventions due to the research of its members benefited the entire nation. It was a peace-time achievement with a great and most promising future, which, under the guidance of Herr von Trost, was in most excellent hands; unfortunately, the war robbed me of this joy.

The event justified us. The so-called "Russian experts" of Berlin, as well as the official world, were mistaken.

During the very first years of my reign there was occasion for much important building work. First, there was the question of erecting a worthy monument over the tomb of my grandparents. Since the old mausoleum at Charlottenburg was inadequate, it was necessary to erect an addition. Unfortunately, the funds left by Emperor William the Great for such "extra construction"—the so-called extra construction fund—had been used up during the ninety-nine days on something else. Hence I was obliged to burden the crown revenues with unforeseen building expenses. The mausoleum of my parents at Marly was erected by the Empress Frederick, according to her own sketches and designs, and for this, too, I had to provide the funds.

A thorough examination of the royal palaces—including those in the provinces—had revealed, particularly at the palace in Berlin, such deplorable conditions in sanitation, comfort and so on, that there could be no more delay in remedying them. In the course of my thirty years' reign I restored these palaces to good condition—working in accordance with carefully prepared budgets, examined, corrected and supervised by myself with the help of architects (such as Ihne), and of artists, with due regard for the traditions of my ancestors—all of which gave me much trouble and tried my patience, but also provided me with a great deal of enjoyment.

Architectural Interests. In restoring the Berlin palace, the Empress Frederick, with her sure, keen eye for the proper style and her sound judgment, helped materially in offsetting the harm and neglect dating from bygone days. My mother's expression of her view ought surely to be of general interest. "Any style is good so long as it is pure," Ihne used to call the encyclopaedia of the '90s "a peu pres style" (the "Almost Style"). The restoration of the picture gallery, the last work of Herr Ihne—who died, unfortunately, all too soon—was not completed until during the first half of the war. The palace of my forefathers, erected at much pains and a source of pride to me, was later bombarded, stormed, sacked and devastated by revolutionary hordes.

These artistic building enterprises, as well as the already-mentioned restoration of the white drawing-room, belong among the duties of representation devolving upon every government, be it absolute, constitutional or democratic in form. They afford a criterion of the national culture and are means of encouraging artists and, through them, the development of art.

During my vacations I busied myself with archaeology, and was active in excavation work. Here I kept in view one basic idea: to recover the roots from which ancient Greek art developed and to erect or find a bridge in the endeavor to establish the cultural influence of the East on the West. It appeared to me that Assyriology was important, since from it might be expected an elucidation and vitalizing of the Old Testament. My vacation in the Holy Scriptures. Therefore I accepted with pleasure the offer of the presidency of the German Oriental Society, and devoted myself to the study of the Old Testament, to the best of my ability, never missing one of its public lectures on the results of its explorations. I had much to do, and I was not alone. I had a number of detailed reports to be made to me of the excavations at Nineveh, Assur and Babylon, in Egypt and in Syria, for the study of which I had promoted and personally brought influence to bear on the Turkish government.

Professor Deltzsch, a member of the society, gave his well-known and much-attacked lecture on "Babel and Bible," which, unfortunately, fell upon the ears of a public as yet too ignorant and unprepared, and led to all sorts of misinterpretations, some of them in church circles.

I strove hard to clear up the matter. Since I realized that the importance of Assyriology, then enlisting the efforts of many prominent men, including clergymen of both religions, was yet understood and appreciated by the general public, I had my trusted friend and brilliant theatre director, Count Huisen-Haesler, produce the play "Assurbanipal," after long preparation, under the auspices of the German Oriental Society. Assyriologists of all countries were invited to the dress rehearsal; in the boxes all mixed together, were professors, Protestant and Catholic clergymen, Jews and Christians. Many expressed to me their thanks for having shown, by this performance, how far research work had already progressed, and for having at the same time revealed more clearly to the general public the importance of Assyriology.

My sojourn at Corfu likewise afforded me the pleasure of serving archaeology and of busying myself personally with excavation. The accidental discovery of a relief head of a Gorgon near the town of Corfu led me to take charge of the work myself. I called to my aid the experienced excavator and expert in Greek antiquities, Professor Dorpfeld, who took over the direction of the excavation work. This savant, who was as enthusiastic as I for the ancient Hellenic world, became in the course of time a faithful friend of mine and an invaluable source of information in questions relating to architecture, styles, and soon among the ancient Greeks and Achaeans.

"Hud" As a Guide Book. It was a joy to hear Dorpfeld read and elucidate the old Homeric poems, and establish, by means of a map, and following the hints and descriptions of the poet, the location of the old Achaean settlements destroyed later by the Doric migration. It appeared that the names of the old places had often been transferred by the dispossessed inhabitants to the new places. This made the identification of the location more difficult. Nevertheless, Dorpfeld had rediscovered the location of a whole series of them, with the help of his Homer, which he carried in his hand like a Baedeker, hitting upon it by following the minute geographical descriptions given by Homer.

This interested me so much that I took a trip by water, with the empress, in the company of Dorpfeld, in order to put the matter to the test. We went to Leukas (Ithaca) and visited, one after another, the places made famous by the "Odyssey," while Dorpfeld read, referring to each, I was amazed and had to admit that the region and the description tallied exactly.

The excavations begun by me in Corfu under Dorpfeld's direction had valuable archaeological results, since they produced evidence of an extremely remote epoch of the earliest Doric art, with a lot of superfluous acrimony discussion. From all this, it seems to me one of the most important things I have achieved, namely, the bridge, sought by me between Asia and Europe is assuming shape.

I sent reports regularly to the Archaeological Society and I also brought the well-known Professor Caro from Athens to work with me. I was busy with preparations for lectures to be delivered before the society during the winter of 1911-12, and with searching discussions on many disputed questions, which I hoped to bring toward a solution since I had studied it with a pleasure to me to be visited almost regularly at Corfu by English and American archaeologists, former pupils of Dorpfeld, who helped zealously in following light on the difficult problems which often came up. Since they were at work in Asia Minor, I was deeply interested in hearing what importance they attached to the Asiatic influence on early Greek art—as a result of their discoveries—and how readily they recognized a connection with the East in the finds made at the palace in Berlin. Professor Duhn of Heidelberg visited the excavations at Corfu, and, after thorough investigation, gave his support to the views held by Dorpfeld and me. I shall tell in a separate piece of writing about the result of my Corfu excavations.

That was the sort of thing which, in the spring of 1911, occupied the thoughts of the German Emperor, who, lusty for robbery and conquest, is accused of having bloodthirstily brought on the war of 1914. What was exciting and discussing Gorgons, Doric columns and the Asiatic influence on early Greek art?

LAY $100 ON PLATE AT THANKOFFERING

The usual mid-week prayer meeting in New St. James' Presbyterian Church was withdrawn on Wednesday evening this week for the annual thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society. A collection of $100 was laid on the plate.

Mrs. D. M. Christie of Woodstock, Ontario, was the speaker of the occasion, taking as her texts, "Christ, the Bread of Life," and the motto of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, "The World for Christ."

The task the W. M. S. has set itself she pointed out, is nothing more nor less than sharing in the winning of the world for Christ. Strength for the task can alone be found, she declared, through feeding upon Christ, the bread of life.

Rev. James Mackay, minister of the church, presided. Mr. C. Pink sang a solo, and a duet by Miss Corbin and Mr. Pink rounded out the program. A beautiful and impressive prayer of dedication of the thankoffering was made by the oldest member of the auxiliary, Mrs. Hugh Omond.
