While favorably impressed with the proposal that the city council provide one mill in the tax-rate, Ald. Douglass, chairman of the finance committee makes this qualification, that "the city must retain the disposal of the money."

"That would be the only fair way to do it," he stated. "We'll do it that way. We must make provision for relief but we must also have the disposal of any money we grant. We can't allow such control to pass out of our hands."
