

Miscellaneous.

It is commonly supposed that men are detached from the body of an army or called upon to determine for themselves their distance from an object to be fired at. Experience abundantly proves that soldiers, by continued practice, may learn to estimate distances up to 600 to 800 yards with considerable accuracy by simple, rapid observation. Every soldier is supposed to have good eye-sight; he, therefore, after a little practice in sight estimating, learns the following facts:

Agricultural.

Most horses will drive better with the hinge or snaffle bit. See that your horse's bit is neither too short nor too long for his mouth. Always take the size up in the bearing, reins and eye-checks on road horses. Horses that are free drivers will require less urging if driven with a bridle with blinds on. Some stylish fancy horses are driven without any bearing rein, though it is safer to use one. Some horses become slow and need more urging when driven regularly with open bits. Horses that shy much and take a strong hold on the bit will sometimes drive better with an open bridle. Every driver of fast road or track horses should use the best forged bits he can get. They are the safest. Some horses will not "go up" on the bit when the over-check and upper-jaw bit are required. In that case try an all-leather upper-jaw bit. For a horse that carries his head up and travels with his nose inclined outward, and does not pull, the bridle-bearing rein will answer. A horse carrying his head low and inclined inward, and does not pull, can best be driven with the over-check attached to the large bit. For some horses that pull moderately an upper-jaw straight bit, attached to the over-check, may satisfy the driver; if not, try a hinged upper-jaw bit. With a bridle without blinds some horses will drive gently to a top wagon, while with the top wagon they will not go up. When the angles of the mouth become sore from the pressure of the bit, apply pulverized alum and honey in equal parts four or five times a day, and use a wide bit. When the mouth and tongue become feverish and bruised a little from the effects of pulling on the bit, sponge these parts with a solution of white oak bark or alum water. Never put an open bridle on your horse until you know he will go safely with it. Some horses will get frightened at a new rubber straight bit or a leather over-check. Have the bit fit nicely. The bit should touch the mouth and do not allow the blinds "W" to open. Have one in the mouth, and the over-check, and loops on the throat latch for bearing reins so that either may be used. A horse that is apt to kick in harness should wear an over-check and an upper-jaw or four-pointed bit. The over-check should be fitted so that the horse's head may be kept high. If the animal should ever kick give him a severe jerk, first with the right line and then with the left. For horses that get the tongue above the bit and hang it out, use the bit lately invented called the "Perfection Bit." It is the best ever invented to the large bit. Or get a flexible piece of rubber and fasten the upper-jaw and large bit together, tying them with strong string, which will answer the same purpose.—National Sports.

Very soon now I shall be strong enough on my crutches to resume my lessons in walking. It is needless to say that I look forward with great pleasure to that moment. Nature intended that I should glide in the easy, tall, gentle limber in the extreme south, soulful, frolicsome at times, yet dignified and reserved towards strangers, light on the foot—on my own feet. I mean—gentle as a woman at times, yet irresistible as a tornado when hurried by a smaller, I am positively fitted to shine in society. Those who have observed my politeness and grace under a strong electric light say that they never saw a man shine so in society as I do.

My wife taught me how to walk. She would teach me on Saturdays and repair her skirts during the following week. I told her once that I thought I was too brainy too soon. She said she would teach me to walk on my feet. I seemed to run too much to legs. My wife is not a little fond of telling me anything that she thinks will be for my good. When I make a mistake she is perfectly frank with me, and she never fails to tell me about it so that I won't do so again.
