

Miscellaneous.

She Outwitted Him.

A young woman was travelling recently in New England. Her husband had been compelled to remain for a day or two in Boston, and she had gone on to meet her sister, who was passing the summer in an out-of-the-way country village.

Here the sleepy-looking port master informed her that the afternoon train had just gone, and that another would start at some time in the evening. She sat for a while in the dreary little waiting-room; but the day was pleasant, and the track, running as it did through a pretty stretch of woods, seemed to invite her steps.

It was but two or three miles to the village. Why shouldn't she walk? Her husband had especially cautioned her against doing this, but really there seemed to be no good reason for his limit.

She was used to walking, and in short she determined to set out, first giving the agent full instructions as to the forwarding of her baggage.

'What an idiot I should have been,' she thought, when she had gone about a mile, 'to stay all this glorious afternoon in that miserable stuffy little station!'

But just when she was thus congratulating herself, a man came suddenly out of the brush about fifty feet in advance of her. She was startled, and for a moment she thought she was being followed.

The fellow was ragged and dirty, a brutish-looking tramp. What could he do? She remembered the splendid solitaire diamonds in her ears. The rascal could not help noticing them; she could see his greedy eyes fastened on them at this moment.

There was no house in sight, and every instant the man was coming nearer. Desperate, but outwardly calm, she decided to hold her own as best she might.

'Good evening,' she said in the gentlest, most ladylike manner. 'If you please, will you be so good as to tell me how far it is to N—? I am entirely alone, and seem to have lost my way. Won't you be good to show me the way?'

The man's eyes were still upon the diamonds. How easy it would be to get them! But this being appealed to as a gentleman was too much for him. He was not used to it.

'I am very sorry,' he answered, 'but I am a traveller like yourself, and an rather a stranger in these parts. It is not my business to show you the way, but I will try to help you in some way.'

'Thank you, no! Good-evening! I wish you a pleasant journey.' The tramp went on one way, and perhaps in an hour was ready to laugh at himself for a fool, thus to be imposed upon by a woman's voice; and the lady went the other way, and in due time arrived at the end of her journey.

What Americans Say of England.

Says Charles F. King, the American educator: 'The great commercial countries to-day are, according to value, Great Britain, United States, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Russia, Austria.'

'The commerce of the British Empire, including India, Canada and Australia, is greater than the united States of France, Germany and the United States. The commerce of England to-day is about nine times as great as it was in 1840. The commerce of France in the same time has increased still more rapidly. Great Britain has the most trade with India, of all her possessions; next come Australia, and then Canada. The United States imports only about half as much from Great Britain as she exports to her; but she exports to Great Britain nearly twice as much now as in 1870.'

'England has over twenty thousand merchant vessels, manned by over two hundred thousand seamen. Her commerce is protected by the largest navy in the world. She has established fortified naval depots for coal and provisions along all the great routes of commerce. For example, in the Mediterranean are Gibraltar, Malta and Cyprus; on the South African route, St. Helena, Cape Town and Mauritius; on the East India route, Aden, Bombay, Calcutta, Singapore and Hong Kong; Melbourne, etc. in Australia; Jamaica and Belize in the West Indies; Halifax and Quebec in Canada. The sea never sees her on her flag.'

Said Ralph Waldo Emerson: 'England is anchored in the side of Europe, and right in the heart of the modern world. It has the best commercial position on the whole planet.'

'Every natural deficiency is compensated by wonderful energy. The country, though foggy and rainy, has furnished the world with astronomical observations. Short rivers do not afford water-power, but the land shakes under the thunder of the mills. With no gold mines, there is more gold in England than in all other countries. Two far north for the veins, the vines of all countries are in its fields. No fruit ripens in England but a laked apple, says a French critic, 'but oranges and pine-apples are cheaper there than in the Mediterranean.'

A power, says Webster, 'that has dotted over the surface of the globe with its possessions and military posts, whose morning drum-beat following the sun and keeping company with the hours, circles the earth daily with an continuous and unbroken strain of the martial airs of England.'

Why Some Young Men Fail.

That so many young men fail to secure lucrative positions, or, having obtained them, fail to retain them, is their own fault, nine times out of ten. They imagine that it is their misfortune; that they do not possess a 'business turn,' or do not have an aptitude for the duties of certain positions; or that their employers carelessly distrust them. But, if they had the courage to go to the bottom of the matter, they would discover that they themselves are to blame. As a general rule, this class of shiftless youths, who find it so hard to retain positions, are not so anxious to secure employment as to draw a salary; they do not like to work and they will not take a lively interest in their duties.

If they are fortunate, through their own efforts, or through the assistance of friends, and secure a satisfactory place, they try only to do just enough not lose it. They do not seek to make themselves indispensable in it, with their eyes steadily fixed on a still higher position which they will certainly be promoted in due time. They do their work languidly, and throw it off their minds the moment business hours are over; so that if it no more fills the next day, when the tasks begins again. There can be no success in this conduct. Employers are sharp-eyed and rarely fail to detect merit in those whom they employ. If one of their assistants is useful to them,

Victim of Christian Science.

The Christian science seems to have been responsible for the untimely death of a fair young Tennessee girl in this city a few days ago. She was the Boston correspondent of the New York Sun. She really had consumption, but she was persuaded that it was only a case of belief and that her so-called scientific advisers forced her to give up the most successful treatment.

She was a devoted and energetic worker in the cause of the oppressed, and she was a devoted and energetic worker in the cause of the oppressed, and she was a devoted and energetic worker in the cause of the oppressed.

'I must say his prophecy looked possible when as hours went by the boy did not improve; still I trusted him. I could assure him that he had been run over or made away with than that he had stolen the money.'

'I did not change my mind when a week had passed. I did not know where he lived or who his associates were, and no newsworthy seemed to be missing. The second week was nearly gone when a woman came into my office one day. She was crying.'

'Are you Mr.?' she asked. 'I am, madam. What can I do for you?'

'Then she told me that her little boy was dying; that he had been ill nearly two weeks, and kept constantly calling my name. I went with her and found my missing newsworthy. As soon as he saw me he began to rave.'

'I told her that it was the burden of his cry, but I alone knew what he referred to. He had lost the $10 note, and it had preyed on his mind, causing brain fever. He died in my arms, unconscious that I had trusted him from the very first, and was forced to undergo pecuniary treatment. The struggle she made against her fatal disease in the endeavor to bear out the reiterated statement of her christian scientist adviser that there was 'nothing really the matter with her,' was nothing short of heroic. She made a daily vigil, regardless of the weather, to a science 'doctor.' Under the regimen prescribed, her usual hour for rising was 6.30, or when awake; in accordance with the theory that her pains were only imaginations, and that she was a sick, Miss Gillespie did a great deal of work almost to the hour that she died. She did some of the cooking as well as other work. This compelled her to go up and down three flights of stairs daily, which often caused her great suffering. Miss Gillespie used often to ask for something to eat between meals, but this was strictly forbidden. At lunch she often asked for a bit of meat or fowl, but this was refused, it being believed that her craving was really nothing but a matter of imagination. Toward the end she tottered often when she went up and down stairs, or when going to see her christian scientist doctor. She said that she couldn't understand christian science at all, but was trying to do the best she could to carry out her ideas, of whom she spoke with affection and respect. She often said: 'In belief I'm dying,' or, 'In belief I have the most dreadful pain.' Miss Gillespie was obliged to get her own meals the day before she died, and was left alone that night.—Boston Herald.

Not an Onset Bay Ghost.

He was a ragged looking, old and hedged with black to a restaurant window. He seemed to be in deep thought. He attracted the attention of a kindly-looking old lady, who asked him what he was thinking about.

'Oh, navvies in particular,' replied the man, 'and the trouble of shunting the blacking-box from one hand to the other. 'But you must have been thinking of something in particular,' persisted the old lady. 'Come, now, tell me what it is, and I'll help you in any way I can.'

'Kiddie,' replied the boy. 'An' I was thinkin' how I'd like to be a ghost.'

'A ghost?' exclaimed the old lady in amazement, 'and pray tell me what you want to be a ghost for?'

'Ghosts can go wherever they please, an' to dime museums an' everything like that, an' never have ter pay anything. 'Ghosts never have to buy no clothes or vittles, nor they don't have ter shine shoes, an' they never have to wash, an' if I was a ghost, and went into some big hotel, and stood by the heater ter get warm, do you think any big bloke of a porter would come around an' kick me out? Not much. You kin just let yer shoes get a little like ter a good common everyday ghost, an' I'd like ter take chances on its bein' unpleasant, every time, I would, an' slingin' his box over his shoulder he snarred off whistling 'Down Went McGinty,' while the old lady stood astonished.

Cross-Grained Shingles.

Every writer in the Country Gentleman says: Every intelligent builder knows that when shingles are shaven or sawed from straight-grained timber, they will last three or four times longer than other shingles of equal thickness and external appearance) saved from cross-grained and winding timber. Unless cross-grained shingles are covered with a heavy coat of paint, they will absorb water like a sponge, so that the parts not exposed to the weather will be thoroughly saturated, sometimes for many successive weeks, before the water will be dried out. I have in mind shingle roofs that required re-painting for seventy years. Recently I saw a shingle roof that I myself put on a building, which had been on for thirty-five years, and had not been painted, neither had there been any repairs made during all that period, and the roof had never leaked. The shingles were white pine, shaved.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever known. It is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 50 cents, 50 cents, and $1. If you have a sore, Chest or Back lame, use Shiloh's Forous Plaster. Sold by Dr. J. C. Rimmer, Bridgetown, and Dr. Morse, Lawrencetown.

Not merely young people, but those who work either mind or body, are better for living largely on a diet of milk. It is particularly favorable for those who make great mental exertion. Gladstone in England used a great deal of milk daily, and his health better sustained than by taking more of his nourishment in the shape of bread and meat.

Several thicknesses of stout paper or roof boards overlaid with burlap, and this heavy coat of paint, they will absorb water like a sponge, so that the parts not exposed to the weather will be thoroughly saturated, sometimes for many successive weeks, before the water will be dried out. I have in mind shingle roofs that required re-painting for seventy years. Recently I saw a shingle roof that I myself put on a building, which had been on for thirty-five years, and had not been painted, neither had there been any repairs made during all that period, and the roof had never leaked. A very melancholy fact is the insanity of Ruskin, the greatest art critic of his time. It seems that for years he has had a friend or relative with whom he was speaking terms. For a long time he has been noted for his irritability and violent outbursts of anger. That itself was an indication of the insane temperament. It is not a pleasant work, either, or a task for which one could be envied, to stand fifty or sixty years picking flaws in one's fellowmen. That of itself is enough to drive a man or woman crazy.

A Cure for Deafness.

There have been many remarkable cures of deafness made by the use of Hagar's Yellow Oil, the great household remedy for pain, inflammation and soreness. Yellow Oil cures rheumatism, sore throat and croup, and is useful internally and externally for all pains and injuries.

IMPORTANT!

Remarable Restoration to Health of Well Known Canadian whose name was given up as incurable.

From the few of the hundreds of letters we have received from those who have been restored to health and strength by the use of that wonderful discovery, Pain's Celery Compound, we make a few extracts. We hope that the thousands of Canadian men and women who are suffering from nervous and wasting diseases, will profit by these true and plain statements of fact.

D. S. Davidson, of Montreal, suffered for years with nervous dyspepsia, pain in his back, and sleeplessness. He tried doctors without relief, was losing flesh rapidly, and had about given up heart when he commenced the use of Pain's Celery Compound. 'Now,' he says, 'I am a new man. I sleep well and my food does not hurt me.'

Mr. Jas. Johnson, 302 St. Charles Boulevard, Montreal, was weak and nervous, had no appetite, and could not rest at night. His nerves were soothed and strengthened by Pain's Celery Compound, and he soon became well and strong.

Amie Conley, of River Beaudette, P. Q., found the Compound a certain cure for weakness, and now feels as well as she ever did.

A customer of Harrison Bros., drug-druggist, Hamilton, Ont., told them that he was a sufferer from nervous weakness by the use of two bottles of the Compound, after everything else had failed.

The little child of Mrs. G. E. Meredith, of D'Arcy St., Toronto, was cured of St. Vitus' Dance by Pain's Celery Compound.
