And White resigns.

NOTES.

- (a) White's QB is now in some danger, for Black threatens to check with Queen and then play P to K Kt 4.
- (b) We question the prudence of this exchange.
- (c) White has now recovered the pawn sacrificed in the opening, but has frittered away all attack.
- (d) Not a very comfortable place for the King; probably K to Kt would have been better.
- (e) The last four moves on Mr. Jull's part are excellent.
- (f) Decidedly the best move under the circumstances, for by giving up the exchange Black remains with Bishop and two formidable passed Pawns against the adverse King.
- (g) These manoeuvres of the Bishop are very skillfully conceived, and put a speedy end to White's struggles.
