Every change is not a change for the better. So thinks Henry Holt, a contributor to the June Forum. Referring to the present generation and the sources from which they seek their mental supplies, Mr. Holt says: "The book-buying habit has fallen off; the pamphlet-buying habit has taken its place. The pamphlet soon finds its way to the waste basket, which, in many cases, it should never have risen above, and the permanent possessions of the household are less than they ought to be by one book. The average American citizen's household are less than they ought to be by one book. The average American citizen's source of intellectual publishm is now the "news stand." It and the toy shop with piles of pamphlet "libraries" at one end have too generally succeeded the bookstore. The old habit of dropping into the bookstore and buying the latest good thing—latest in form or matter—is now indulged in by few people and in relatively few places."
