CURRENT TRADE CONDITIONS.

ONTARIO.

The tumber trade is to a certain extent marking time. This refers especially to large orders, there being some hesitancy about entering into contracts until the season is further advanced and the trend of trade in the United States is more definitely determined. Considering the unfavorable weather conditions, considerable lumber is changing hands. The retail dealers have for some time been carrying light stocks in anticipation of lower prices, but as there is still no evidence that manufacturers will weaken in their asking prices, they are now disposed to replenish their stocks to some extent so as to take care of early spring orders. This buying is assisting to keep the market firm. While United States trade is quiet and shipments have been retarded by the heavy snow storms, there is sufficient buying for home consumption to give a firm tone to the market. Hemlock perhaps leads in point of strength. Some sales of stock to be manufactured during the coming season have been made at $11 50 per thousand, as compared with $11 for the same class of lumber last year. The hardwood demand has not yet commenced to expand, but greater activity is confidently expected very shortly and a good season seems assured. Interior hardwood finish will no doubt be a ready seller, as building operations throughout the province promise to be on a large scale. Shingles are showing a little more strength, although there has been no improvement in prices.

QUEBEC AND NEW BRUNSWICK.

The spruce lumber market has undergone no important change since last writing. There is an yet no pronounced activity, although buying by retail dealers is on a slightly increased scale. It is reported at Quebec that some square timber has been contracted for at an advanced price,
