A reply accepting the offer was received to-day from Mr. Tuckett and this, it is said, gives the American firm the controlling interest in the company. Face value was paid for most of the shares, although they were quoted recently as low as 60. It is said that radical changes in the management of the company will be made at once. J. B. Griffiths, panager of the company, states that he knows nothing whatever of the deal reported.

Management of the Parks.

The Parks Committee met this afternoon to consider the proposal to place the management under an independent board, on the same lines as the City Hospital. The matter was discussed freely and all the members present, Ald. Board, Burkholder, The Eyck, Nicholson and Evans, expressed their approval of the plan. It was decided that the solicitor draft a bylaw for the cemetery's control by a board of managers to consist of four private citizens, the Mayor, chairman of the Parks Committee and another member of the committee. It was agreed to recommend the following as the personnel of the board: Alfred Powis, J. J. Mason, J. O. Callaghan, John M. Eastwood, Mayor Teetzel, Ald. Board and Ald. Burkholder. The committee will meet again on Thursday afternoon to go over the bylaw.

Ald. Ald. Burkholder was opposed to the idea. He wanted the place bricked or asphalted, so that it could be used as an assembly place. The matter dropped on the understanding that it would be taken up at a subsequent meeting.

Lost Teeth Restored.

Nature's teeth are cleverly counterfeited by modern dental art through Crown and Bridge Work. If you have a 5 prominent front tooth that is broken or decayed the root will answer for the anchoring of a new porcelain or gold crown that will restore the lost usefulness and add beauty to the mouth. If several teeth are missing, a light, tiny bridge takes the place of the old-time plate in the mouth and gives a serviceable, durable denture. The cost (Five Dollars per tooth) is little when figured by years of service and comfort. Let's talk it over.

Manufacturing Industries.

Referring to the manufacturing industries, he held that they had been improved by the Government's policy, and that manufacturers were really doing better than under the National Policy. He touched on the reduction of present rates, the increased deposits in banks, and the prosperity of the country generally, to show what the Government's policy was doing.

Immigration was referred to, and the claim made that the immigration last year had increased 20 per cent. Immigration had been general, but largest in British Columbia, and he ventured on the prophecy that when the census of 1901 is taken it will be found that British Columbia is third amongst the Provinces, standing next to Outario and Quebec.

New York Sun Says Friction Over Ontario and Quebec.

Washington Commission.

Touching on the Washington Commission, he claimed that the Canadian Commission had made an honest effort to settle all difficulties between the two countries, which he thought was a better policy than leaving one point open. As the speech only mentioned one point of disagreement, he thought it was a fair inference that on all other points there was at least substantial agreement. He recapitulated the points of difference on the Alaska boundary question, and argued that, in refusing the terms offered, the Canadian Commissioners had upheld the honor and dignity of Canada.

Quite a laugh was raised by Mr. Belf saying that he was aware that there were gentlemen who thought that the Canadian Commissioners "had looked too long upon the wine in the cup," and that they ought to have come home sooner. He went through the other items in the speech, commenting on each, and closed at 4.15 a good address, which would have been better had it been more consistent.

Mr. Martineau seconded the motion in French, speaking for half an hour in general approval of the speech, and following very much the same lines as Mr. Bell. the reports that have reached the British

SIR CHARLES TUPPER

Dispensed the Usual Satire.

Sir Charles Tupper rose at 4.25, and was greeted with hearty applause from the Opposition benches. He commenced, as is usual, by compilmenting the mover and seconder on the very able manner in which they had acquitted themselves, and heartily endorsed the proposition taken by the member for E. Prince (Mr. Bell) that Canada was in a position to be independent of the United States. He also approved of the statement made by Mr. Bell that the proposal of the United States Commissioners that Dyen and Skaguay should be deemed part of the United States, no matter what the arbitrators may decide, was a dishonorable offer, and one which no honorable man could entertain.

The British Government, and is pointly with regard to China and Japan hampered by the exclusion policy of British Columbia, and is bringing pressure to bear on Ottawa to induce the latter to modify its alien legislation to suit the exigencies of England Chinese and Japanese policy. But the British Columbia workingmen, who curiously enough are largely emigrants from Eugland, think more of their own interests than of high politics and insist on being protected against Chinese and Japanese cheap labor. This places Ottawa in a dilemma, for if it coerces Victoria to please London 't may drive the former into resistance, and, perhaps, secession; while if it fails to satisfy London the value of Canada as an "aily" of England, as it is becoming the fashion to say, is just a trifie doubtful. sion, his satisfaction in listening to the nover and seconder had been enhanced by the fact that it would have been impossible for them to have adduced stronger arguments in support of the policy of the great Conservative party than they had done had hey spoken with that object in view. Conservatives Laid the Foundation.

Sir Charles then proceeded to trace the course of the Conservative party from Confederation, showing that by its consistent and progressive policy it had consolidated, built up and developed the country in so enduring a fashion that the prosperity which we are enjoying to-day is due a great deal more to the solid foundation laid by the Conservatives, especially during the last 13 years of their being in power, than anything which the present party has done or left undone since it came into power. He country during the Mackenzie Administration, pictured the condition of the country during the Mackenzie Administration, pictured the condition of the country during the dark days from '74 to '78, and then, coming to the establishment of the National Policy, he showed how the adoption of a protective tariff and the consistent efforts to keep Canada for the Canadians had made the country happy, prosperous and self-sustaining, so that it was entirely son-dependent on any trade with the United States, and was to-day in a position which it could never have attained under the continuance of the unhappy policy adopted by the Liberal party during its first administration.

Sir Charles spoke with great force and constructed to load the dice before and the election was held.

Sir Charles spoke with great force and vigor for a little over an hour, when it was suggested that it be called 6 o'clock, and the Speaker left the chair.

Sir Wilfrid's Game.

Meanwhile Sir Wilfrid Laurier is cleverly diverting public attention from a too in convenient contemplation of these matters by setting his party organs at the Senate. The Provincial Legislatures in the hands of the so-called Liberal majorities, have, at the invitation of Ottawa, been formulating demands for the reform of the Senate, and these demands, joined to the clamor of the party organs, are to be the vox popul, with whose wishes Sir Wilfrid will hasten to comply. The Senate, unfortunately for itself, became a purely partisan body during the 27 years that the nominations to it were in the hands of the Tory party, and since the advent of the present Laurier Government to office it has exercised its power in a partisan manner. At one moment the cry was "Down with the Senate," but the infiltration of converted Tories into the Laurier Government has led to more conservative views that will go no further than mending it. In what way this process will be carried out, whether in making the Senate elective for life or for a term, whether by the vote of the Provincial Legislatures or by popular vote, or whether the power of nomination as it exists now, with some checks, shall continue, remains to be seen. The chief point of interest in this matter is the way in which so great a constitutional change as this will involve can be brought about without clashing with the prerogatives on the suzerain power, and being used as a step toward the complete independence of Canada from allen control and interference, a matter about which nearly every Canadian is thinking and a good many are talking, not withestanding the Pleasant assurances of the Canadian High Commissioner in London to the British Colonial Secretary. After-Dinner Remarks.

Sir Charles continued his remarks on the Washington negotiations, saying that it was to be regretted that an adjournment had been consented to after the dishonorable proposal made by the United States Commissioners. Still, he did not think it would make much difference, as he did not believe the commission would meet again on Ang. 2, as the adjournment was said to rest on the settlement of the Alaska boundary difficulty by Great Britain and the United States, and if that failed there would be no necessity for the commission to meet again. He thought that, as the Canadian commissioners had, unwisely, he thought, decided that all the questions must be settled or none, it would have been best for Sir Wilfrid Laurier to have broken off negotiations entirely when the Alaska boundary proposal was made. He did not advocate retallation, but he thought the Government might very wisely copy some United States legislation. [Applause.] The Government had been acting as if it desired to destroy any chance of getting a satisfactory treaty.

Sir Charles explained that he meant that it was at variance with the facts, because the record showed that the Conservative party was not unfriendly to the United States. He criticized the statement made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the Atlantic fisheries difficulty ought to be settled on the basis of the treaty of 1871, namely, free fishing for free fish, because the treaty of 1871 provided far more than that. It provided for an arbitration by which Canada received five and a half million dollars.

Inter-Imperial Trade. Turning to the question of inter-imperial trade he showed how the contention of the Liberal leaders and the Liberal press that Great Britain would never adopt any policy in the slightest way approaching protection, was entirely refuted by the statements of Lord George Hamilton and The London Times, that Great Britain might impose a duty on corn and sugar. He also called attention to—the approval by the Imperial Government of the countervaling duties on sugar adopted by the Indian

The Plebiscite.

He touched on the Pacific cable scheme, which had been practically killed by the Premier, at the time of the cable conference in London in 1897, and passing on to the plebiscite on the prohibition question, charged the Government with bad faith towards the large temperance element in Canada, and blamed the Fremier for wasting a quarter million dollars on a vote which meant nothing. If the Premier had wanted a genuine vote he should have announced before the vote what the Government would do.

He then spoke about the miserable mail scrvice in the Yukon, and read some extracts from Vancouver papers and from The Globe to show that the service was miserable.

The Gerrymander Threat.

He referred to the threatened 'rearrangement of the electoral districts," and challenged the right of the Government to make a change in the constitution, which already provided that the constituencies can only be changed after each census. He challenged the Government to bring on a general election, and said that this attempt to violate the constitution showed that the Government was affaid of the electors, who had been deceived in 1896, and wanted to load the dice before another election was held.

Nearly everybody has read Jules Verne's famous book and is acquainted with the story. The play is funier than the book. In about nine scenes the audience is taken to a good many places and sees a good many things it wouldn't believe if it didn't see. The production is clever, as well as amusing.
