Judge Mabee said that the railway board had no right to go beyond the provisions of the Lord's Day Act, but only to interpret the provisions of that measure. He doubted whether the delivery of empty cars to cattle ship-pers on Sundays was necessary. Mr. Tiffin, superintendent of the northern division of the Grand Trunk Railway, declared that if the Canadian ports of Midland, Meaford, and Collingwood were to hold their own in the grain trade against American competitors, the grain carriers must be allowed to handle this traffic without any undue delay. Otherwise the grain would be carried to American Brownlee, transportation man ager, said he had figured out that if the moving of engines war rot allowed on Sundays the Grand Trunk would lose the handling of five million bush-els of grain in the balance of this October.

The board also took up the consideration of the question of the cardecided that the railways should appoint a committee of trainic experts to co-operate with the board.

This confirmation of the condition of the motive power lends credibility to a rumor coming from the west that the engineers and firemen on the Lake Superior division contemplate quitting Superior division contemplate quitting work within the next few days.

J. Harvey Hall, legislative representative of the railway unions, stated to The World last night that the men could go out if the engines were considered unfit or unsafe to run.

"This," said he, "while abounting to the same thing, would not be a strike, and the men could ignore the Lemieux bill entirely in this regard."
