Jeanne of the Marshes
BY E. P. OPPENHEIM

"Charming!" the Princess declared, sitting up among her cushions. "I should love to see him and to see the only thing in the world I want to make me happy."

Cecil de la Borne stood silent for a moment or two, looking at her with a somewhat surprised expression on his face. He seemed, in fact, to be waiting for her to say something more, but she said nothing more.

"The man lives there alone, I believe," he said. "If you like, you may go to see him, but you must be careful not to be seen."

"I do not think," she said, "that it would be easy to see him. He is not in the habit of coming out."

"Let me hear the condition at any rate," Cecil asked.

"That we go straight back, and that you show us that suburban passage," Jeanne declared.

"Agreed!" Cecil answered. "I warn you that you will find only damp mud and depressing, but you shall certainly see it."

The girl moved toward the side of the boat, and stood leaning over the railing, looking at the island. Standing on the small grass plot in front of the cottage she could see the tall figure of a man with his face toward the water. A faint smile parted her lips as she watched. She took out her handkerchief and waved it. The man for a moment stood motionless, and then raising his cap he did a bow from above his head. The boat sped on, and soon they were out of sight. Cecil asked her, however, watching until they rounded the sandy spit, and entered the bay, something unusually piquant to her in the thought of that greeting with the man whose response to it had been so unwilling, almost ungracious.

CECIL, CHAPTER VIII.

"Not another step!" the Princess declared. "I am going to see him. You are my ancestor, my dear de la Borne, and indeed have loved adventures, if they are much of their time crawling about like rats."

"As you will," Cecil answered. "The expedition is Miss Jeanne's, not mine."

"And I am going on," Jeanne declared. "I want to see where we come out on the beach."

"This way, then," Cecil said. "You need not be afraid to walk upright. The reef is six feet high, and the way must be tread carefully, though. There are plenty of holes and stones about. Jeanne, with her skirts tied high in one hand, and an electric torch in her other, followed Cecil along the damp, gloomy way. The walls were coated with damp, glistening patches, and illuminated salt stains, and queer fungi started out from unsuspected places. Cecil, however, took steps full on the rock, awakening strange echoes down the gallery. Sometimes they sank deep into the sand, Cecil looked at ten behind, and once held out his hand to help his companion over a difficult place. At last he passed, and he heard him struggling to turn a key in a great wooden door on their right.

"This is the room," he explained, where they held their meetings, and where the stuff was hidden. It was used for more than twenty years, and the Customs people never seemed to have had even an inkling of its existence."

He pushed the door open with difficulty. They found themselves in a gloomy chamber, with vaulted roof and stone floor. A faint streak of daylight from an opening somewhere in the roof, partially lit the place. Here, too, the walls were damp and the odour appalling. There were some fragments of broken barrels at one end, and an oak table in the middle of the floor. Jeanne looked round and shivered.

"Let us go on to the end," she said.

not, we had better go in. There is only one way, 'Esa,' Forrest said, in which we could improve matters. 'And what is that?' she asked quickly. 'Don't you think we could get our host in?'

The Princess was silent for several moments.

"It is a little dangerous, I am afraid," she said.

"I don't see why," Forrest answered. "If he were once in he'd have to hold his tongue, and you can do just what you like with him. He seems to me to be just one of those pulpy sort of persons."

PEARY WOULD NOT BRING RECORDS OF COOK FROM NORTH

Harry Whitney Wires Explorer—Coming Home Soon

New York, Sept. 26.—Commander Robert E. Peary refused absolutely to allow any of the records or instruments of Dr. Frederick A. Cook to be brought aboard the steamer Roosevelt and was thus instrumental in causing the records to remain in a cache at Etah, Greenland, according to Harry Whitney the New Haven sportsman, who has just received in this city by Dr. Cook yesterday.

The message, which came as a response to one sent by Dr. Cook, is as follows: "Stratocoma, via Indian Harbor and Cape Ray (Nfld.), Sept. 25. "Dr. F. A. Cook, Waldorf, New York. "Start for home Roosevelt. Nothing arrived for me. Peary would allow nothing belonging to you on board. Said to leave everything in cache at Etah. "Met Captain Sam, North Star. Did not go back after schooner bound St. John's, take steamer home. Stop you well. See you soon. Explain all. Good shooting."

"HARRY WHITNEY."

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 26.—Wireless despatches received here say that the schooner Jeanie, which is bringing Harry Whitney, the New Haven sportsman, to civilization, left Indian Harbor yesterday morning for St. John's and likely would not call at Etah before half past five. It is expected that the Jeanie will arrive here Wednesday.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 25.—According to despatches received here Harry Whitney, who is now in Indian Harbor, says that Dr. Cook told him at Etah last April that he is bringing to the United States. Mr. Whitney declines to give further details until he reaches some point where he can get at the foot of the controversy.

Fashion Hint for Times Readers

OVERSKIRTS THAT BUTTON IN FRONT.

By Christmas, prophesy the dressmakers, we shall all be wearing overskirts of some sort or other; but these overskirts are still kept very flat, not increasing the slenderness of the silhouette at all. Many of the new overskirts button down the side of the front like this one. This is a bridge frock of purplish blue bengaline silk and another new feature is the deeply pointed girdle of embroidered lace which opens in festive fashion over the skirt.

St. Stephen's

The pulpit in St. Stephen's church was occupied yesterday morning by Rev. Prof. D. J. Fraser, D. D., LL. D., of the Theological College of Montreal, and a former student of St. Stephen's. His subject was the Potter's Wheel. He spoke of the general trend of the eastern thought as fatalistic and declared that the western thought was much more optimistic and hopeful. He said that the story of the potter's wheel should not be taken as complete in itself as the vessel might be broken but the potter could easily repair it or construct another one.

His sermon was listened to by a very large congregation.

Professor Fraser is on his way to Montreal, having spent the summer in Greece and different cities in Europe. He came here from Prince Edward Island, where he has been visiting his mother. He will resume his duties in the college at Montreal in the very near future and will leave here tomorrow.

Nardi, aged 20 years, of this city. Nardi had been shot directly into the left eye of Roach, who was standing but a few feet away. When the authorities reached the scene Nardi was brought to the city under arrest and will be given a hearing in court tomorrow.

REV. EDMUND WOOD DEAD

Montreal, Sept. 26.—(Special)—The Rev. Edmund Wood, rector of the church of St. John the Evangelist, a well known high church leader who for fifty years was actively engaged in church work, passed away at 7 o'clock this morning, being stricken with heart disease while telephoning. On account of his high church tendencies he was called "Father" Wood. He came to Canada in 1859 and since then has labored in the parish, of which in later years he became the rector, building up a fashionable congregation. Rev. Father Wood was eighty years of age and with Canon Gilligan was the oldest clergyman of the Anglican church in the diocese of Montreal.

JEWS IN NEW YORK NOW NUMBER FROM 700,000 TO A MILLION

(American Exchange.)

The extent to which the city of New York is influenced by its Hebrew population is little realized by Americans who do not live within that city. Nowhere else in the world, and at no time in its history, have so many Hebrews congregated. The number in New York city, including Brooklyn, is variously estimated, and only the census of 1910, now preparing to be taken, can determine the exact figures. There are, however, not fewer than 700,000 and the number may reach 900,000 or 1,000,000.

The Jewish holidays, Sept. 18 to 25, this year, affected New York as never before. Postmaster Morgan has been compelled to give notice for the first time that holiday cards and remembrances, customarily to be sent at the season by Jews, must be got into the mails early in order not to congest other mails. Moreover, as the postmaster observes in his public notice, a large proportion of the carriers in the large religious festivals, which will keep the religious service, which will cause the service to be interrupted, in which there are 675,000 children, are affected by these holidays to a marked degree. For these reasons, it is expected that by another year not all of these evils have been stopped, it is expected that by another year reforms will be both effective and permanent. So marked are these reforms, and so well disposed are the prosperous Hebrews in the better parts of the city, that the old cry of the Christians against the in-migration of Jews is hardly heard more. New York city is readily heard, itself in many ways on account of the Jews. The immigration is not falling off. Other cities may be called upon to go through similar experiences and changes.

THE LOBSTER CATCH

A Montreal despatch says—"The lobster catch on the Atlantic coast is only about 50 p. c. of last year; prices within the last month have advanced 10 per cent," said Fred Magee, of Port Elgin, N. B.

"The Canadian demand is small," said he, "but the export demand is good with Great Britain and the Continent taking all they can get. Last year there was a very large catch, which glutted the market, and prices slumped, but this season, owing to the scarcity, prices have already advanced, and are likely to reach a much higher level."

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 26.—"Seven years ago I went to the city for hospital treatment, suffering from a tumor of the uterus. The doctor said it was a cancer, and that I would have to be operated on. I was told that I would not live more than six months in the condition I was in. After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Silver Falls

The reopening of the Silver Falls Methodist church took place yesterday. Services were conducted at 11 a. m. and at 7 p. m. At the morning service, Rev. G. M. Campbell occupied the pulpit, and in the evening Rev. Mr. Hutchinson of Main street Baptist church preached. The church has been thoroughly renovated throughout. New heating and lighting apparatus has been installed, and a new pulpit has been built, and the church has been newly painted and varnished. The cost of the repairs amounts to about $300.
