INTERESTING HISTORY

The New York Evening Post reviews a recent book entitled, "The Development of Freedom of the Press in Massachusetts," by Clyde Augustus Dunaway, associate professor of history in Leland Stanford Junior University. The book will have a local interest for maritime provinces readers because it includes a review of the conditions in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia as well as in Massachusetts in the first half of the nineteenth century. We quote from the Post's review:

"In New Brunswick, the legislature assumed that it had powers to punish offending newspaper publishers, much as the General Court of Massachusetts in 1722 punished James Franklin of the New England Courant, when it ordered the high sheriff of the county of Suffolk to detain Franklin in the stone prison during the pleasure of the court. The New Brunswick assembly at Fredericton, about 1830, committed the publisher of the Miramichi Gleaner to jail. In 1844 it similarly committed Hill and Doak, the publishers of the Loyalist; but in this case there was an appeal to the courts, as there was in the case of Daniel Fowle, who, in 1755, was committed to jail by the General Court of Massachusetts for printing a satirical account of the debates of the house on an unpopular excise bill. In Fowle's case a judicial decision barred the action and assessed the costs against the plaintiff. In the Hill and Doak case in New Brunswick, however, to the dismay of the legislature, the attempt to bar the action on the same plea that was successfully advanced in Massachusetts in 1759, failed. The printers of the Loyalist recovered damages from the speaker and the sergeant-at-arms; and it was discovered that the Canadian legislatures had never possessed the power which they had used in committing printers to contempt. They did not possess this power 'because,' in the words of a judgment of the judicial committee of the privy council in London in 1845—a judgment which governed the New Brunswick case—'the ordinary tribunals of the colony were sufficient to investigate and punish past misconduct.'"

"This may seem a digression on the part of the reviewer; but it is not an impertinent digression, for a glance at the history of the free press in Canada shows that Dr. Dunaway has good ground for his claim that in confining himself to Massachusetts it was possible to treat 'every new step to give a true picture of historic development.' Another reason for regarding Dr. Dunaway's work as of more than local value is to be found in the copious footnotes which record parallel developments in other of the thirteen colonies. In a word it is much more than the history of the development of a free press in Massachusetts. Either in the text or in the footnotes there is to be found the history of a free press in the United States; and as most of the early newspapers in the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were begun by United Empire Loyalists who had emigrated from Boston, and who were familiar with the status of the press in Massachusetts in the years immediately preceding the Revolution, Dr. Dunaway's work will have to be taken into account by the historian of the constitutional development of the press in the Dominion of Canada."

Mr. John A. McGillivray, who has been compelled by ill-health to resign the office of Supreme Secretary of the Independent Order of Foresters, has been one of the most popular officers of that order. He was once elected to parliament, but objections were taken to the dual position and he soon dropped out of politics. He has a good record in the militia of Ontario, and has for years been deeply interested in the agricultural progress of that province. Mr. McGillivray has warm personal friends throughout Canada and wherever the I. O. F. extends.

The American side of the Newfoundland dispute makes much of the alleged fact that it is the fish merchants and not the fishermen who are denouncing the modus vivendi. It is suggested that a Newfoundland delegation should be sent to Canada to appeal for sympathy. There has been of late considerable denunciation of Canada's alleged eagerness to absorb the ancient colony. It is now perceived that there is another light in which the relations of the two may be regarded.

The provincial premiers are unanimous in expressing a willingness to accept larger subsidies from the federal treasury for their respective provinces. They have practically reaffirmed the resolutions of 1902. There is nothing new in their attitude, and the feature of the case in which interest centres is the attitude of the federal government toward those persistent supplicants. The issue should not be very long in doubt.

The announcement is made that as soon as the Onanody has her boiler tested the two old ferry steamers will be ready for work. The city has a fleet of three ferry steamers and appears to need them all. The cost of keeping them in running order would go a long way toward paying interest on the cost of one good ferry steamer.

The appointment of Mr. Myles to the principalship of the high school was anticipated, and that there has not been a word of protest is the best tribute to his fitness for this important position. The change will also give Supt. Bridges needed opportunity for more effective oversight of the city school system in general.

The author of the Man from Glenary would find material for a thrilling chapter in the fatal strike riot at Buckingham, Quebec, yesterday. Such incidents are uncommon in Canada, where the supremacy of law, when not immediately recognized by unruly persons, is promptly enforced by the arm of authority.

The deity whom the late Honore Beaudry of Montreal worshipped is great enough, it may be hoped, not to be seriously concerned over the disposal of his mortal part, whether by cremation or burial, in hallowed or unhallowed ground. The strife, if any there be, will be purely human.

The patience with which the citizens endure the scarcity of water, due to bursting mains in the tests now being made, is certainly commendable. Not that they have lacked opportunity to exercise this virtue in the past, but the present provocation is exceptional.

The village of St. Martins has been attracting an unusual degree of public attention to itself of late. Is all this derelict trumpeting preliminary to the announcement that the biggest moose ever seen has been shot by Squire Skillen in that neighborhood?

The United States government has decided that the Panama Canal can best be dug by contract, and not as a government work. It is doubtless a wise decision.

Will the political regenerator of New Brunswick, foreshadowed in the announcement of a new political party, be a Hearst or a Moran?

The amalgamation of the technical schools of Dalhousie and King's College, at Sydney, will give the town a more efficient institution without affecting the status of either university.

Having an expert on dredges placed at their disposal the members of the city council are now wondering what they can do with him.

REVEREND DONKEYS

Bishop Garrett, of Dallas, Texas, relates this story of an incident that occurred when he was living in Victoria, B. C., many years ago:

"I remember the iron church and the old cathedral on the hill very well. I also remember an incident which was amusing, in the iron church. Once the great archdeacon preached a flowery sermon in St. John's in the morning. The evening sermon was preached by the Rev. C. T. Woods, who was out in the morning at a mission station. The archdeacon occupied a pew in the evening service. When the text was given out he picked up his cane and sat very straight. The opening sentence was the same as that of the morning; and so was the next and the next, even to the last! Some of those who had been present in the morning and had complimented the archdeacon upon his eloquence, began to smile and nudged each other. At last the end came. The ven. archdeacon went into the vestry, where some of the morning flatterers were repeating their forenoon praises! At length they left, bustling with laughter. Then the archdeacon said: 'I see that we two donkeys have been eating the same cabbage.'"

OCTOBER COMES

Under cool elm trees hosts the distant stream.
Moveless as air, and o'er the vast warm earth.
The fathomless daylight seems to stand and dream.
A liquid cool elixir—all its gifts
Bound with faint hair, a trail transparency,
Whose lucid purple barely veils and fills
The utmost valleys and the thin last hills.
Nor must one wait their perfect clarity.

Thus without grief the golden days go by,
So soft we scarcely notice how they wend,
And like a smile half happy, or a sigh.
The summer passes to her quiet end.
And soon, too soon, around the clustered eaves
Sly frosts shall take the creepers by surprise.
And through the wind-touched reddening woods
October with the rain of ruined leaves.

IN LIGHTER VAIN
SMOKED HIM OUT.

Mrs. Flubb—Did you have a hard job making your husband give up smoking?
Mrs. Dubble—Not so hard as I had making him give up $80 for a tailor-made suit.

NO DOUBT OF IT
Professor—"Mr. Higginson, in which of his battles was Nelson killed?"
Mr. Higginson—"Why, I er—er—think it was in his er—last battle, professor."

ARTFUL WILLIE
Miss Migg—It was good of you, Willie, to give that poor, blind man your apple, but what are you waiting for?
Willie—I want to see if he'll find the worm in it—Sketch.

TIME TO GO.
"When my wife has a fit of temper I do not get angry. I regard bad temper as a disease."
"But what treatment do you give it?"
"Absent treatment."

SO FOOLISH OF HIM.
And then, mind you, exclaimed Miss Peasey, he asked me if I wouldn't marry the first man that came along.
The ideal remarked Miss Knox. Don't those obviously unnecessary questions make you sick?

READY TO DIE.
Hi Lee—Chicago advertised for five free lunch inspectors under the pure food law and received 500 applications.
Hi Low—Still it's no wonder. Some men are so rich and healthy, they go up against anything—Indianapolis Star.

THE ANTI-DOTE.
Hicks—He doesn't spend much time at home, you say?
Kicks—No; she has become so crabbed of late that he has joined a club and puts in his time there.

BACK UP!
A farmer who was noted for his meanness, owns a horse, which, to it mildly, is rather thin. As if to make up for the smallness of its body, however, the animal has a head out of all proportion. Of course, people talk about that horse, and the owner doesn't like it.

Recently he went to the expense of a new collar for his new steed. Ten minutes after departure under the pure food law and received 500 applications.
Hi Low—Still it's no wonder. Some men are so rich and healthy, they go up against anything—Indianapolis Star.

"Look here!" he blurted out, "you've made it too small; I can't get it over his head!"
"Over his head?" ejaculated the saddler. "Man, it wasn't made to go over his head. Back him into it!"
